United Nations Places Katanga President Under House Arrest

Kennedy Wins Rules Fight

Steps Taken To Restrain Tshombe

Threatens Congo With Scorched Earth Program

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — The United Nations announced Wednesday night instructions have been given to the U. N. force in the Congo to put Katanga President Moise Tshombe under house arrest.

The announcement was made by a spokesman for Secretary- General U Thant.

It said the only way Tshombe can prove his good faith is to permit peaceful entry of the U. N. forces into Kolwezi.

He said that unless such proof is given "there can be no more question of a contact with Mr. Tshombe on other matters."

The spokesman added that therefore, the U. N. Congo force had been instructed to restrain Tshombe "from further irresponsible acts."

By DENNIS NEELD

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, the Congo (AP)—Moise Tshombe circled back Wednesday from a declaration of purely peaceful aims to a warning that he will explode scorched earth warfare in defense if the U.N. Congo command strikes farther toward Kolwezi.

U.N. executives here studiously ignored the Katanga president. A senior official said, "We will convey messages to United Nations headquarters for him, but that is all."

In Leopoldville, Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, the top U. N. figure presently in the Congo, asserted the United Nations is not "waiting for Tshombe."

War Headquarters

Kolwezi is Tshombe's war headquarters and the center of a vast copper mining and industrial complex 150 miles northwest of Elisabethville. Two hydroelectric stations there provide three-fourths of the province's power. A U.N. task force fought its way last week to Jadotville, a half-way point on the Elisabethville-Kolwezi road, then stalled.

Tshombe told a news conference in his Elisabethville palace, to which he returned only Tuesday, that Katangans have placed demolition charges in every major industrial installation.

Voices Threat

"We have decided to work on a scorched earth policy and will carry it out if they try to advance on Kolwezi," Tshombe said.

"On the matter of liberty of movement for the United Nations — that's one of the subjects we can discuss. We are men of good will."

Reiterating approval of U.N. Secretary-General U Thant's plan to reunify the Congo so long as it is not imposed by force, Tshombe said:

"U Thant's plan must be applied simultaneously by Leopoldville and by me, and I am ready to consider all its applications."

The implication was that Tshombe, whose overtures for further negotiations have been snubbed by the U.N. hierarchy, figured there would have to be additional talks.

That idea, however, got no support from Bunche, the U.N. undersecretary who flew out of Elisabethville Tuesday with the apparent aim of avoiding Tshombe.

Troops At Ready

Bunche declared in Leopoldville, the Congo capital, that Thant has not ordered U.N. troops to hold up at Jadotville, that they are still awaiting armor and trucks delayed by Katanga demolition of Lufira River bridges east of Jadotville.

Tshombe seemed to have discarded British and Belgian ad-

Hagerstown Fire

Furniture Store Is Destroyed In Hagerstown

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A general alarm fire destroyed a furniture store on U.S. 40 in downtown Hagerstown Wednesday, and damaged three adjoining buildings. Two persons were injured.

More than 100 firemen fought the blaze for three hours before bringing it under control. There was no damage estimate but the owner said it was a total loss.

In Baltimore, Mrs. Emma Bighouse, 58, died in her apartment bedroom when her bedclothing and linen caught fire early Wednesday.

Two other fires in the Baltimore suburbs of Towson and Essex Wednesday forced two families to flee their homes. And near Cambridge, a three-story home first owned by a cabinet adviser of President Lincoln was leveled by fire Tuesday night.

The Hagerstown fire broke out about 10 a.m. in the basement of a three-story brick building which houses the furniture firm of Meyers and Berkson Inc.

A dozen families were evacuated from apartments on the third floor. The firemen, mostly volunteers, included two companies from nearby Funkstown and Halfway.

Man, Woman Hurt

The injured were a woman overcome by smoke, who was treated at the scene, and fireman Jack Green, who suffered minor burns.

Louis Meyers, owners of the furniture store, said it was a complete loss but could not give a damage estimate. He said the building was insured for its cost when built 40 years ago, but it could not be replaced for that amount.

Fire Chief John Hall could not be reached but the Hagerstown Fire Department seldom gives dollars and cents estimates on fire damages.

Adjoining structures heavily damaged were the Hagerstown Paint and Glass Co. and Miller Auto Supply, both two-story brick buildings. Damaged to a lesser extent was the O.P. Bohman Tire Co.

The cause of the fire had not been determined.

All available State Police city police and Washington County officers were called out as all westbound traffic on U.S. 40 had to be detoured around the city. Much of the business district was clogged with smoke and an entire block in the fire area was roped off.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. William Reid, who lived on the third floor of the furniture building. She smelled smoke in her hallway, when it came up the stairwell, and telephoned the furniture store.

Night Club Blaze

At Essex, in suburban Baltimore, fire was discovered at a night club and restaurant. The one-story frame building was empty but firemen feared it would spread to a home 10 feet away, so Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Palugi and their children were evacuated.

In Towson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Clark were awakened by smoke as fire broke out in a two-story office building housing a restaurant and sporting goods store. Both went out on a second-floor ledge and Clark lowered his wife to the ground before letting himself down.

The fire burned out Sorrento's Restaurant and damaged Webster's Sporting Goods store.

Fire At Cambridge

The home all but destroyed by fire near Cambridge is now owned by Mrs. Sadie Bell, who was in Gettysburg at the time of the fire. A son, Arthur Moore, escaped without injury. The house is situated in the Castle Haven area near Cambridge.

In Baltimore's University Hospital, Mrs. Annie Thomas, 75, died Tuesday night of burns suffered when her clothing caught fire Dec. 29. She was trying to light a gas heater in her home when it happened.

Another Baltimore fire broke out Tuesday night in the Morris Hotel. No one was injured. Burning grease started the fire, which sent smoke billowing through the small hotel.

Fire Damages 9 Floors In N.Y. Empire Building

By ARTHUR EVERETT

NEW YORK (AP) — A smoldering fire crept up a towering pipe shaft and mushroomed into offices high above the street Wednesday in the 102-story Empire State Building, the world's tallest skyscrapper. A discarded cigarette tentatively was blamed for the blaze, which caused no injuries but vast confusion.

Choking curtains of smoke forced night workers to flee offices as high as the 85th floor, only one level below the observatory, where millions of tourists have marveled at the grandeur of a 40-mile view.

The entire building twice was evacuated, as nine floors between the 24th and 68th were damaged by the flames.

A water main broke, adding to the turmoil. Thousands of workers, unable to get to their desks on time, milled behind police barricades, craning their necks at smoke plunging out of their own offices. Six of the building's 74 high speed elevators were knocked out of service.

One of Manhattan's main crosstown arteries, 34th Street was closed for a block and a rush hour traffic jam ensued.

A few television and radio broadcasts, beamed from atop the majestic structure were knocked off the air for a time.

The fire marshal's office offered an "educated guess" that a workman carelessly had discarded a cigarette Tuesday beside the felt-like covering of a cold water pipe that rises to the 85th floor of the building through a utility shaft. All other conduits in the shaft were covered with asbestos, which does not burn.

The fire apparently smoldered for hours, silently eating its way up the shaft, growing in intensity and sending off unheeded warning wisps of smoke.

Superb protective facilities within the 1,472 foot building, in the words of fire officials, made the fire-fighting "much easier than would ordinarily be supposed by the public."

Damage to the 31-year-old skyscraper, queen of the New York skyline, was minor compared to that of July 28, 1945, when an Army bomber crashed into the 79th floor and exploded. Thirteen persons died in that disaster.

Bidwell Wins Federal Tax Evasion Case

NEW YORK (AP)—J. Truman Bidwell, former board chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, was acquitted on income tax evasion charges Wednesday.

A federal court jury brought in the verdict for acquital after three and a half hours of deliberations.

During the trial, which began before Judge Thomas F. Croake on Dec. 6, the government tried to prove that Bidwell, 58, and his wife had filed returns for 1956 and 1957 with intent to evade some $55,000 in taxes.

The Bidwells had testified that they had paid out business expenses and charity contributions, claimed as tax deductions, from large sums of cash kept in a steel box in a closet, a safe deposit box, and a file cabinet in Bidwell's office.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Stephen E. Kaufman termed this contention, "fantastic," and charged much of the claimed expenses were fictitious.

President's Support Is Decisive

JFK Gratified With Margin On Committee Size

By STANLEY MEISLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 88th Congress opened for business Wednesday and dealt sudden death to conservative members' hopes of recapturing control of the key House Rules Committee.

This victory for President Kennedy had been expected, but the size of his margin was a surprise. On the decisive vote in the House, his supporters won 235-196.

The vote kept the size of the Rules Committee at 15 members. If Kennedy's forces had failed, it would have reverted to 12 members, leaving the committee in the grip of a coalition of conservative Republicans and Southern Democrats opposed to major elements of Kennedy's legislative program.

Controls Flow Of Bills

The committee, which controls the flow of most legislation to the floor of the House, had been under the domination of this coalition until two years ago. Then Kennedy forces, led by the late Speaker Sam Rayburn, eked out a 217-212 victory that increased the size of the committee from 12 to 15 members.

Wednesday, with the help of Georgia Democrats and some new Republicans, Kennedy increased that five-vote margin to 39 votes—a boost that may buoy his hopes for smoother sailing through Congress this year.

Kennedy was described by White House press secretary Pierre Salinger as "most gratified" by the outcome.

Ceremony In Senate

While the House opened its new session with a vital and decisive battle, the Senate contented itself with ceremony, good will, and a postponement of real business until after Kennedy delivers his State of the Union address to Congress on Monday.

Senators agreed they could put off until then their various proposals to curb filibustering and their probable filibusters against the proposals.

So the big news of the Senate centered on the new faces there —a few better known to the craning gallery spectators than some of the old faces.

The familiar new faces included Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the President's youngest brother, and Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., the President's former secretary of welfare.

Sen. Kennedy's wife, his mother, and three of his sisters sat in the galleries, smiled, and watched the new senator take his oath of office while his colleagues applauded loudly.

67 New Members

The House had its ceremonies, too, with 67 new representatives taking their oath for the first time. But the ceremonies, which included the formality of re-electing all House officers, gave way quickly to the decisive business of voting on the issue of the rules committee.

During debate, both sides invoked the memory of Rayburn in support of their arguments.

Rep. Howard Smith, D-Va., chairman of the Rules Committee, told the House that the late speaker never intended permanently to keep the committee's size at 15.

But Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, Rayburn's successor, stepped down from the speaker's rostrum, just as Rayburn had done two years ago, and quoted Rayburn's 1960 words: "I think the House should be allowed on great measures to work its will."

Kuznetsov, Kennedy Hold Informal Talk

By LEWIS GULICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy met with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov Wednesday in the first high-level U.S.-Soviet discussions since the formal ending of the Cuban missiles crisis.

The White House talks were billed as informal, and a courtesy to the Soviet leader before he returns to Moscow. But they could pave the way for broader U.S.-Soviet talks later.

Kennedy was joined by only two aides as the session got under way in the President's office. They were Llewellyn Thompson, former U.S. ambassador to Moscow, and John C. Guthrie, State Department Soviet office head.

Kuznetsov was accompanied by Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin and two lower-ranking aides.

U.S. authorities said no specific agenda had been set up for the meeting.

Kuznetsov has been representing his country in New York since last October in the negotiations aimed at settling the Cuban crisis. These talks were formally concluded with a joint statement to the United Nations two days ago.

In advance of the afternoon session, aides described the meeting as exploratory. They said Kennedy was prepared to listen to any subject the Soviet emissary wished to bring up.

Kennedy in turn had a chance to impress his views on a Soviet leader who is expected to report forthwith to the Kremlin. Kennedy did not plan to give Kuznetsov a written message for Premier Khrushchev, it was reported.

Disarmament was one topic certain to be featured in the Kuznetsov discussions. The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed, it was announced Wednesday to postpone from Jan. 15 until Feb. 12 the reconvening of the 17-nation disarmament conference in Geneva.

The purpose, as stated by a U.S. spokesman, was to give the Soviets more time to revise their position on disarmament and a nuclear test ban.

1962 Catholic Family Named In Minneapolis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Catholic Family of 1962 is that of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Seidel of Minneapolis and their 11 children — who include two nuns and two priests.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference announced the selection Wednesday and said the family will receive a plaque honoring them on Holy Family Sunday, which is next Sunday. The presentation will be made by Archbishop Leo Binz of St. Paul, Minn.

The selection was voted by the archdiocesan and diocesan directors of the Family Life Bureau, social action department, National Catholic Welfare Conference.

The Seidel sons who are priests are Fathers John J. Seidel, 35, curate of St. Peter Canisius Parish in Chicago, and Thomas E. Seidel, 31, Holy Cross father who teaches at Notre Dame High School in Chicago.

The youngest daughters—Sisters Mary Gabriel, 23, and Catherine, 19—are at St. Paul's Benedictine Priory in St. Paul. Daughters Joan, 26, and Barbara, 25, are lay teachers.

Arctic Blast Presses Down On Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A fast-moving blizzard and cold wave hit northern regions of the midcontinent Wednesday and the arctic surge pressed southward toward northeastern New Mexico, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle.

The combined lash of snow, cold and whipping winds closed schools in wide sections of northern Montana. Visibility was cut to zero on many Montana highways and emergency travel only was recommended in some places. Car chains were needed on most mountain passes.

Special blizzard warnings went out to stockmen, motorists and schoolchildren.

The cold wave struck on the heels of a balmy spell that sent temperatures into the springlike upper 40s. The mercury started skidding about midnight in northern Montana, dropping from the low 30s to -7 at Cut Bank by midmorning.

The cold air also was expected to spread across most of the Midwest by late Thursday.

Cold wave and blizzard warnings were issued for large sections of the northern Rockies, northern Great Plains and northern Minnesota, with strong winds and blowing snow moving down into the central Great Plains on Thursday.

The arctic blast stemmed from a huge mound of cold air crested over the Yukon Territory where temperatures ranged down to -62. An overnight low of -20 was forecast for northern Montana.

Nine Miners Die

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Nine miners have died in a flooded coal mine, the news agency Ceteka reported Wednesday. It said water from an abandoned mine burst into an adjacent pit where the men were working Monday in the Ostrava-Karvina coal basin on the Polish border.

India Rejects New Proposal Of Red Chinese

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India has rejected a Red Chinese proposal that Indian forces stay out of Himalayan areas evacuated by Communist troops after the Nov. 22 cease-fire in the India-China border conflict, the Foreign Ministry reported Wednesday.

The Red Chinese proposal was made in a letter from Premier Chou En-lai to Prime Minister Nehru on Dec. 20. The proposal and Nehru's reply dated Jan. 1 were made public by the Foreign Ministry.

Nehru wrote that rather than repeating the old arguments they should "explore what other possibilities are available to avoid the development of further conflict." He referred to the proposals of the six nonaligned nations that met last month in Colombo.

Nehru also referred in his letter to his suggestion in the Indian Parliament that the dispute be referred for a decision on its merits to the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

Chou wrote, "Everybody anxiously hopes the unstable state of the cease-fire will not again develop into a border conflict."

To stabilize the cease-fire, Chou proposed that as the Chinese withdrew the "Indian troops should stay in their present positions along the entire Chinese-Indian border" pending agreement on the disengagement of forces.

Dental Supplies Flown To Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A chartered Pan American Airways plane flew $290,000 worth of drugs, medical supplies and dental equipment to Cuba Wednesday—another payment to Fidel Castro on the $53 million ransom for the Bay of Pigs invasion captives.

Cuban Red Cross workers quickly unloaded the 15,600-pound cargo at Havana and the plane remained there approximately one hour, then returned to Miami.

Last week, 250-Cuban-Americans were told they could leave Cuba, but none came out on this flight.

"This flight was strictly to ferry supplies," said Enso Bighinatti, assistant national director of Red Cross disaster services. Another delivery flight is scheduled Friday.

Khrushchev Expected To Take Political Shotgun To East German Red Congress

LONDON (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev is expected to bring a double-barreled political shotgun with him to the Berlin congress of East German Communists next week.

Diplomats of East and West forecast Wednesday that Khrushchev may let loose broadsides against his Red Chinese rivals as well as his Western foes.

The speculation among authorities here is:

—Khrushchev will suggest face-to-face talks with Mao Tze-tung, or other top Red Chinese leaders, in a new attempt to head off a threatened break between the Soviet and Chinese Communist parties. Any such meeting would take place at a conference of world Communist leaders similar to those held in 1957 and 1960.

—Khrushchev also will offer his version of a Berlin compromise with the West. It would involve "conceding" the right of U.S., British and French troops to stay on in the divided city—but only under the flag of the United Nations and not under national or North Atlantic Treaty Organization banners. The Russians, heretofore, have demanded the replacement of U.S., British and French garrisons by those of smaller powers.

Khrushchev's visit to East Germany will be his sixth since 1955.

His presence at the East Berlin congress opening Tuesday is expected to attract other European Communist leaders, possibly transforming the occasion into something approaching a Red summit meeting.

Khrushchev left Moscow on Wednesday night. Moscow radio said he was stopping off at Warsaw en route to East Berlin. The Polish Communist chieftain, Wladyslaw Gomulka, will head Poland's delegation to East Berlin.

The Red Chinese party has been invited to East Berlin but top-rankers are unlikely to show up. The comrades of little Albania, in Moscow's doghouse, have not even been asked.

Diplomats from both sides of the Iron Curtain here speculate openly about the possible excommunication of the Chinese Communist party—just as the Albanian party has been excommunicated.

10,000 View Mona Lisa At First Public Showing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mona Lisa held court for about 10,000 Americans at her first public showing here Wednesday, and the comments were mixed.

They ranged from "wonderful" through "pretty good" to "grotesque."

The last adjective applied not to Leonardo da Vinci's masterpiece but to the arrangements under which visitors to the National Gallery of Art got to spend only a very brief time in her presence.

A gallery guard who has a second hand on his watch helped a newsman determine how long each caller on Mona gets to spend in close-up communion. It averages three to five seconds.

The men tend to bring the average down. They move along right smartly, apparently awed by the Marines frozen at parade rest, their bayonets gleaming.

Wednesday, the line was forming, four abreast, near Giovanni Bologna's statue of Mercury, and it took only eight minutes to proceed from there to Mona. Sundays it probably will take a lot longer.

It was Mrs. Albert Blum of nearby Takoma Park, Md., who used the word "grotesque."

"To think," she said, "that we have heard so much about this great painting and we can get such a short glimpse."

Museum officials explained it has to be this way, or else the line would stretch for blocks.

New Treasurer Is Sworn In

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Kathryn E. Granahan, D-Pa. was sworn in today as treasurer of the United States at a White House ceremony.

With President Kennedy standing by her side, Mrs. Granahan took the oath from Herbert Miller, assistant executive clerk of the White House.

"It is a pleasure to pass on this certificate (of appointment) to a distinguished former member of Congress and a great campaigner," Kennedy told her.

Mrs. Granahan, of Philadelphia, succeeds Mrs. Elizabeth Rudel Smith who resigned last April.

India Rejects New Proposal Of Red Chinese

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — India has rejected a Red Chinese proposal that Indian forces stay out of Himalayan areas evacuated by Communist troops after the Nov. 22 cease-fire in the India-China border conflict, the Foreign Ministry reported Wednesday.

The Red Chinese proposal was made in a letter from Premier Chou En-lai to Prime Minister Nehru on Dec. 20. The proposal and Nehru's reply dated Jan. 1 were made public by the Foreign Ministry.

Nehru wrote that rather than repeating the old arguments they should "explore what other possibilities are available to avoid the development of further conflict." He referred to the proposals of the six nonaligned nations that met last month in Colombo.

Nehru also referred in his letter to his suggestion in the Indian Parliament that the dispute be referred for a decision on its merits to the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

Chou wrote, "Everybody anxiously hopes the unstable state of the cease-fire will not again develop into a border conflict."

To stabilize the cease-fire, Chou proposed that as the Chinese withdrew the "Indian troops should stay in their present positions along the entire Chinese-Indian border" pending agreement on the disengagement of forces.

President's Support Is Decisive

By STANLEY MEISLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 88th Congress opened for business Wednesday and dealt sudden death to conservative members' hopes of recapturing control of the key House Rules Committee.

This victory for President Kennedy had been expected, but the size of his margin was a surprise. On the decisive vote in the House, his supporters won 235-196.

The vote kept the size of the Rules Committee at 15 members. If Kennedy's forces had failed, it would have reverted to 12 members, leaving the committee in the grip of a coalition of conservative Republicans and Southern Democrats opposed to major elements of Kennedy's legislative program.

Controls Flow Of Bills

The committee, which controls the flow of most legislation to the floor of the House, had been under the domination of this coalition until two years ago. Then Kennedy forces, led by the late Speaker Sam Rayburn, eked out a 217-212 victory that increased the size of the committee from 12 to 15 members.

Wednesday, with the help of Georgia Democrats and some new Republicans, Kennedy increased that five-vote margin to 39 votes—a boost that may buoy his hopes for smoother sailing through Congress this year.

Kennedy was described by White House press secretary Pierre Salinger as "most gratified" by the outcome.

Ceremony In Senate

While the House opened its new session with a vital and decisive battle, the Senate contented itself with ceremony, good will, and a postponement of real business until after Kennedy delivers his State of the Union address to Congress on Monday.

Senators agreed they could put off until then their various proposals to curb filibustering and their probable filibusters against the proposals.

So the big news of the Senate centered on the new faces there —a few better known to the craning gallery spectators than some of the old faces.

The familiar new faces included Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the President's youngest brother, and Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., the President's former secretary of welfare.

Sen. Kennedy's wife, his mother, and three of his sisters sat in the galleries, smiled, and watched the new senator take his oath of office while his colleagues applauded loudly.

67 New Members

The House had its ceremonies, too, with 67 new representatives taking their oath for the first time. But the ceremonies, which included the formality of re-electing all House officers, gave way quickly to the decisive business of voting on the issue of the rules committee.

During debate, both sides invoked the memory of Rayburn in support of their arguments.

Rep. Howard Smith, D-Va., chairman of the Rules Committee, told the House that the late speaker never intended permanently to keep the committee's size at 15.

But Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, Rayburn's successor, stepped down from the speaker's rostrum, just as Rayburn had done two years ago, and quoted Rayburn's 1960 words: "I think the House should be allowed on great measures to work its will."

Kuznetsov, Kennedy Hold Informal Talk

By LEWIS GULICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy met with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov Wednesday in the first high-level U.S.-Soviet discussions since the formal ending of the Cuban missiles crisis.

The White House talks were billed as informal, and a courtesy to the Soviet leader before he returns to Moscow. But they could pave the way for broader U.S.-Soviet talks later.

Kennedy was joined by only two aides as the session got under way in the President's office. They were Llewellyn Thompson, former U.S. ambassador to Moscow, and John C. Guthrie, State Department Soviet office head.

Kuznetsov was accompanied by Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin and two lower-ranking aides.

U.S. authorities said no specific agenda had been set up for the meeting.

Kuznetsov has been representing his country in New York since last October in the negotiations aimed at settling the Cuban crisis. These talks were formally concluded with a joint statement to the United Nations two days ago.

In advance of the afternoon session, aides described the meeting as exploratory. They said Kennedy was prepared to listen to any subject the Soviet emissary wished to bring up.

Kennedy in turn had a chance to impress his views on a Soviet leader who is expected to report forthwith to the Kremlin. Kennedy did not plan to give Kuznetsov a written message for Premier Khrushchev, it was reported.

Disarmament was one topic certain to be featured in the Kuznetsov discussions. The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed, it was announced Wednesday to postpone from Jan. 15 until Feb. 12 the reconvening of the 17-nation disarmament conference in Geneva.

The purpose, as stated by a U.S. spokesman, was to give the Soviets more time to revise their position on disarmament and a nuclear test ban.

1962 Catholic Family Named In Minneapolis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Catholic Family of 1962 is that of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Seidel of Minneapolis and their 11 children — who include two nuns and two priests.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference announced the selection Wednesday and said the family will receive a plaque honoring them on Holy Family Sunday, which is next Sunday. The presentation will be made by Archbishop Leo Binz of St. Paul, Minn.

The selection was voted by the archdiocesan and diocesan directors of the Family Life Bureau, social action department, National Catholic Welfare Conference.

The Seidel sons who are priests are Fathers John J. Seidel, 35, curate of St. Peter Canisius Parish in Chicago, and Thomas E. Seidel, 31, Holy Cross father who teaches at Notre Dame High School in Chicago.

The youngest daughters—Sisters Mary Gabriel, 23, and Catherine, 19—are at St. Paul's Benedictine Priory in St. Paul. Daughters Joan, 26, and Barbara, 25, are lay teachers.

Arctic Blast Presses Down On Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A fast-moving blizzard and cold wave hit northern regions of the midcontinent Wednesday and the arctic surge pressed southward toward northeastern New Mexico, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle.

The combined lash of snow, cold and whipping winds closed schools in wide sections of northern Montana. Visibility was cut to zero on many Montana highways and emergency travel only was recommended in some places. Car chains were needed on most mountain passes.

Special blizzard warnings went out to stockmen, motorists and schoolchildren.

The cold wave struck on the heels of a balmy spell that sent temperatures into the springlike upper 40s. The mercury started skidding about midnight in northern Montana, dropping from the low 30s to -7 at Cut Bank by midmorning.

The cold air also was expected to spread across most of the Midwest by late Thursday.

Cold wave and blizzard warnings were issued for large sections of the northern Rockies, northern Great Plains and northern Minnesota, with strong winds and blowing snow moving down into the central Great Plains on Thursday.

The arctic blast stemmed from a huge mound of cold air crested over the Yukon Territory where temperatures ranged down to -62. An overnight low of -20 was forecast for northern Montana.

Nine Miners Die

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Nine miners have died in a flooded coal mine, the news agency Ceteka reported Wednesday. It said water from an abandoned mine burst into an adjacent pit where the men were working Monday in the Ostrava-Karvina coal basin on the Polish border.

Dental Supplies Flown To Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A chartered Pan American Airways plane flew $290,000 worth of drugs, medical supplies and dental equipment to Cuba Wednesday—another payment to Fidel Castro on the $53 million ransom for the Bay of Pigs invasion captives.

Cuban Red Cross workers quickly unloaded the 15,600-pound cargo at Havana and the plane remained there approximately one hour, then returned to Miami.

Last week, 250-Cuban-Americans were told they could leave Cuba, but none came out on this flight.

"This flight was strictly to ferry supplies," said Enso Bighinatti, assistant national director of Red Cross disaster services. Another delivery flight is scheduled Friday.

Khrushchev Expected To Take Political Shotgun To East German Red Congress

LONDON (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev is expected to bring a double-barreled political shotgun with him to the Berlin congress of East German Communists next week.

Diplomats of East and West forecast Wednesday that Khrushchev may let loose broadsides against his Red Chinese rivals as well as his Western foes.

The speculation among authorities here is:

—Khrushchev will suggest face-to-face talks with Mao Tze-tung, or other top Red Chinese leaders, in a new attempt to head off a threatened break between the Soviet and Chinese Communist parties. Any such meeting would take place at a conference of world Communist leaders similar to those held in 1957 and 1960.

—Khrushchev also will offer his version of a Berlin compromise with the West. It would involve "conceding" the right of U.S., British and French troops to stay on in the divided city—but only under the flag of the United Nations and not under national or North Atlantic Treaty Organization banners. The Russians, heretofore, have demanded the replacement of U.S., British and French garrisons by those of smaller powers.

Khrushchev's visit to East Germany will be his sixth since 1955.

His presence at the East Berlin congress opening Tuesday is expected to attract other European Communist leaders, possibly transforming the occasion into something approaching a Red summit meeting.

Khrushchev left Moscow on Wednesday night. Moscow radio said he was stopping off at Warsaw en route to East Berlin. The Polish Communist chieftain, Wladyslaw Gomulka, will head Poland's delegation to East Berlin.

The Red Chinese party has been invited to East Berlin but top-rankers are unlikely to show up. The comrades of little Albania, in Moscow's doghouse, have not even been asked.

Diplomats from both sides of the Iron Curtain here speculate openly about the possible excommunication of the Chinese Communist party—just as the Albanian party has been excommunicated.

10,000 View Mona Lisa At First Public Showing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mona Lisa held court for about 10,000 Americans at her first public showing here Wednesday, and the comments were mixed.

They ranged from "wonderful" through "pretty good" to "grotesque."

The last adjective applied not to Leonardo da Vinci's masterpiece but to the arrangements under which visitors to the National Gallery of Art got to spend only a very brief time in her presence.

A gallery guard who has a second hand on his watch helped a newsman determine how long each caller on Mona gets to spend in close-up communion. It averages three to five seconds.

The men tend to bring the average down. They move along right smartly, apparently awed by the Marines frozen at parade rest, their bayonets gleaming.

Wednesday, the line was forming, four abreast, near Giovanni Bologna's statue of Mercury, and it took only eight minutes to proceed from there to Mona. Sundays it probably will take a lot longer.

It was Mrs. Albert Blum of nearby Takoma Park, Md., who used the word "grotesque."

"To think," she said, "that we have heard so much about this great painting and we can get such a short glimpse."

Museum officials explained it has to be this way, or else the line would stretch for blocks.

New Treasurer Is Sworn In

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Kathryn E. Granahan, D-Pa. was sworn in today as treasurer of the United States at a White House ceremony.

With President Kennedy standing by her side, Mrs. Granahan took the oath from Herbert Miller, assistant executive clerk of the White House.

"It is a pleasure to pass on this certificate (of appointment) to a distinguished former member of Congress and a great campaigner," Kennedy told her.

Mrs. Granahan, of Philadelphia, succeeds Mrs. Elizabeth Rudel Smith who resigned last April.

Maryland Seats New Senator In 88th Congress

3 Congressmen Take Oath For First Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maryland's first Democratic senator in 10 years — Daniel B. Brewster — took office Wednesday as the 88th Congress got under way.

Three new house members from Maryland also were sworn in.

Brewster, who moved up from the House, is the state's first Democrat in the Senate since the departure in 1952 of Sen. Herbert R. O'Conor.

Brewster replaced Republican Sen. John Marshall Butler who defeated the late Sen. Millard E. Tydings, Democrat, in a bitter campaign in 1950. Butler did not seek re-election. O'Conor was succeeded by Republican Sen. J. Glenn Beall.

Following Senate custom, Brewster was escorted down a Senate aisle by Beall for the swearing in ceremony.

Watching from the gallery were Mrs. Brewster and the couple's two sons — Gerry, 4, and Danny Jr., 6. Also present were the new senator's mother, Mrs. William F. Cochran, Glyndon, Md., and five brothers and sisters.

Brewster, at 39, is one of the younger senators.

Friends of Brewster planned a reception for him later in the day in the Senate Appropriations Committee room.

The three newcomers to Congress from Maryland are Reps. Carlton R. Sickles, Democrat, who was elected congressman at large; Clarence D. Long, Democrat, 2nd District, and Rogers C. B. Morton, Republican, 1st District.

In the galleries to see Sickles sworn in were his wife and daughter, Simone, 13, and his mother, Mrs. C. W. Sickles of Washington.

Sickles held an informal open house in his office suite after the opening ceremonies. His staff is headed by Ted Venetoules, Towson, as administrative aide, and James Reid, legislative assistant.

Various relatives of Long — one of several Longs in the 88th Congress — were on hand to see him officially become a House member. Included were Mrs. Long; their two children, Susanna Elisabeth, 17, and Clarence III, 19; Long's mother, Mrs. Clarence Long Sr., of Baltimore, and a brother and a sister.

Long's son had a big day for himself — he was named an honorary House page for the day.

His staff will include Col. Gregory F. Fitzgerald, administrative aide; Miss Margaret Conway, legislate assistant; Christopher Pfrommer, press assistant; Mrs. Arabella Denniston, human relations; Mrs. Lais Romjue, secretary; Miss Betty Anne Swanson, receptionist, and Richard C. Lewin, special projects.

Watching Morton take the oath were Mrs. Morton and their daughter, Anne Morton, 18, and a group of friends from Easton. Morton also planned an informal open house.

Morton has announced these members of his staff: William Mills, Easton, administrative aide; Miss Georgiana Sheldon, special projects; Miss Opal Van Horn, secretary, and Mrs. Pat Phillips.

South America's population is more than 131 million.

London Businessman Buys Old Steam Engine He Yearned For As A Boy

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP) — The boyhood dream of a 42-year-old businessman more than came true Wednesday. He bought the very railway locomotive he once yearned to drive.

"A long time ago—when I was a little boy—someone took me to see the world's finest engine, the Flying Scotsman," said Alan Pegler.

With a nostalgic sigh he added: "The big locomotive, painted bright green, was at a London exhibition. I stood there enchanted as I dreamed of driving it."

Next Monday Pegler will drive it. For on that day the engine that pulled the Flying Scotsman will be making its last run.

Britain's nationalized railways —from whom Pegler bought the locomotive for 3,000 pounds ($8,400)—agreed to let him ride in the cabin as a regular crew takes the Scot on its final run.

"We're not supposed to say this," said a railway spokesman, "but of course he'll be invited to take the throttle. The regular driver will be right there with him, though."

Explaining why he bought the engine, Pegler said:

"It's worth that much in scrap, but perish the thought I'd ever do that. I want to preserve it as an example of one of the finest locomotives of its time."

The Flying Scot is reported to be the first steam engine to do 100 miles an hour. When retired it will have covered more than two million miles. It still holds the record for the London to Leeds run—two hours and 31 minutes for 190 miles. It was built in 1923 for 8,000 pounds (then about $40,000).

Court Of Appeals Reverses Ruling On Lawyers' Practice

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—The Maryland Court of Appeals struck down Wednesday a Montgomery County Circuit Court requirement that lawyers must maintain an office in the state in order to file pleadings before that court.

The high court said the requirement conflicts with its general rules of practice which permit attorneys admitted to the Maryland bar to practice anywhere in the state.

The suit was brought by two Washington, D.C. attorneys, both members of the Maryland bar, who had sought to file a pleading in Montgomery County.

Mona Lisa's Smile Flashed By Relay

NEW YORK (AP)—Television straddled the Atlantic via America's new space communications station Wednesday, flashing Mona Lisa's smile on two continents simultaneously.

A 10-minute program was transmitted through the originally ailing satellite, Relay, happily perked up to a fine performance.

Reception on both continents was reported excellent, for the most part. U.S. officials were elated.

The program, a video-taped portion of the NBC "Today" show, consisted of ceremonies at Washington's National Art Gallery on Tuesday night where President Kennedy opened the display of the famed portrait, Mona Lisa.

"I have come back to Elisabethville with the sole purpose of bringing back as early as possible calm and peace to Katanga and to all its people.

"This consists essentially in rapidly applying the U Thant plan without new effusions of blood and useless destruction.

"It follows from this that I shall abstain in these circumstances from any declaration hostile to the United Nations."

The reaction at U.N. headquarters in New York was aloof. Sources there suggested Tshombe could cooperate by ordering Katangan gendarmery to surrender Kolwezi.

Swiss Report 17 Prisoners Well Treated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Swiss diplomats have reported that 17 American prisoners of the Castro regime in Cuba are being well treated and are in better health than a few months ago, the State Department said Wednesday.

The department also said it had hoped that the first of some 250 other American citizens who have been blocked from leaving Cuba might be flown out Wednesday on a Red Cross plane. But the plane, carrying more medical supplies to Havana for the ransom of Cuban invasion prisoners, returned without them.

Department officials said they did not know what went wrong and that they still hoped two more Red Cross planes scheduled to fly to Cuba Friday might return some of the prisoners.

Department Press Officer Lincoln White said the Swiss ambassador in Havana and two of his aides visited the 17 American prisoners on the Isle of Pines last Saturday.

Previous reports had said the prisoners earlier were in very poor health, suffering from malnutrition and lack of medical supplies.

N.Y. Milliners Get Pay Raise, End Strike

NEW YORK (AP)—Representatives of striking millinery workers and their employers agreed Tuesday on a new three-year contract, ending a strike that began last Thursday.

Settlement came before the strike interfered with the lucrative Easter business, traditionally the trade's high point of the year. The market here produces four fifths of the nation's supply of women's hats.

The strike had idled some 10,000 members of the AFL-CIO United Hatters, Cap and Millery Workers Union at 350 manufacturers.

Shop stewards representing five locals unanimously agreed to accept the terms of a settlement. The agreement is subject to ratification by the Eastern Womens' Hat Wear Association, which said it would recommend acceptance of the new contract, retroactive to Jan. 1.

The contract provides a 10 per cent increase for all piece workers. The agreement calls for an immediate 2½ per cent raise, 2½ per cent next January and 5 per cent on Jan. 1, 1965.

Russia Says Thirty-Two Siberians Who Sought Refuge In U. S. Embassy Are Back Home

MOSCOW (UPI) — Communist officials said Tuesday the 32 Russian peasants who unsuccessfully sought refuge in the U.S. Embassy last week from alleged religious persecution have returned to their homes in Siberia.

The officials, however, declined to disclose whether any of the 14 children in the party had been taken from their parents or give any further details on the fate of the group.

The men, women and children who identified themselves as "evangelical Christians," pushed their way into the U.S. Embassy last Thursday, and asked for asylum and aid in going to any foreign nation where they would be free to practice their religion.

U. S. authorities explained they were powerless to grant refugee to Soviet citizens and the peasants were turned over to Soviet officials.

A Communist party official in the Krasnoyarsk territory of Siberia told Western newsmen by telephone Tuesday that the group arrived at their hometown of Chernogorsk Sunday.

The official, who said she was head of the party's school section for Krasnoyarsk, was asked how many of the children had been taken away from their parents.

"I can't tell you how many have been taken away," she replied.

Asked why children in general had been taken from homes of the peasants in face of parental objections, she answered: "I can't tell you anything about this."

A Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman in Moscow said the ministry had "no news, no details" concerning the fate of the Christian peasants.

A U. S. Embassy spokesman said the embassy had received no information. At the time the peasants were taken from the embassy Soviet Foreign Ministry representatives assured U.S. officials they would be treated properly.

CD Test Alert Slated Saturday

OLNEY, Md. (AP) — Civil Defense warning sirens in Washington, D.C., and the adjacent Maryland and Virginia counties will sound for one minute in a test at 11:55 a.m. Saturday.

W. L. Scarborough, acting regional director of civil defense, said the test is to enable the public to get familiar with the sound of the sirens. The devices go through a brief check each week.

JFK Notes Mona Lisa Is Second Lady Sent To United States By France

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President and Mrs. Kennedy led American dignitaries Tuesday night in a brilliant tribute to the "second lady the people of France have sent to the United States—the Mona Lisa."

In a speech that touched on the sentimental and political ties between the United States and France, Kennedy praised Leonardo Da Vinci's 459-year-old painting loaned to this country by France.

"Though she will not stay here as long as the Statue of Liberty, our appreciation is very great," Kennedy said.

He spoke at a special private opening of a four-week exhibition of the masterpiece at the National Gallery of Art. The public is being admitted this week.

The President shared the platform with France's Minister of Culture Andre Malraux before a formally clad audience of 2,000 specially invited guests from Capitol Hill and the diplomatic corps.

Malraux said the painting was loaned to this country "because no other nation would have received her like the United States."

He also said the painting was sent in tribute to the American servicemen who came to the aid of France in World Wars I and II. Without them, he said, the painting would not have been saved.

Card Party To Be Held March 20

Resumption of workshops and plans for a public card party were announced at the meeting of the Bedford Road Homemakers Club, conducted by Mrs. Paul Gilford Tuesday evening. A workshop on Swedish weaving preceded the meeting. The next will be on smocking pillows at 7 p.m. before the February meeting; and one on making things out of plastic doilies, in March.

The card party, sponsored by the club, will be held March 20 at 1 p.m. in the Bedford Road fire hall. Mrs. Thomas Wotring, Mrs. Helen Wilson, Mrs. Frederick Roberts and Mrs. O. C. Judy are in charge of arrangements.

Following the Homemakers Creed, Mrs. Gilford read the history of the hymn, "All Beautiful the March of Days," which was sung by the group with Mrs. Thurmond Castle at the piano. Roll call was answered with what members want to make in 1963. Mrs. Jerry Thompson was received as a member.

Routine reports were given by Mrs. Helen Wilson, Mrs. William Knisley and Mrs. Marjory Broadwater. Mrs. Gilford read the constitution and by-laws and reported on the county board meeting, with election changed from December to May and installation in June. Present officers will remain in office an additional six when the new schedule will go into effect. Program books will be distributed in June instead of January. Home management leaflets were distributed. It was reported that $72.25 was made on the project of Christmas wreaths, trees and turkeys. Mrs. Ruth Lindner was reported a patient in Sacred Heart Hospital.

The group sang, "America" and refreshments were served by Mrs. W. O. Wolford, Mrs. S. E. Simons, Mrs. Irene Critzman, Mrs. Knisley and Mrs. Marion Day. Twenty-four members attended.

Receives Reports

Announcement of an Americanization program was made at the meeting of Henry Hart Auxiliary 1411, VFW. It will be May 3, in the War Memorial Building, Baltimore. Flags will be presented to Boy Scouts, auxiliaries and other organizations. A program also will be presented.

Mrs. Clara Mantheiy conducted the meeting Tuesday evening. The colors were presented and Mrs. Elizabeth Nave offered prayer. Mrs. Virginia Parker was accepted as a new member. A letter of appreciation from Mrs. Mary Saxton, house mother of the Maryland cottage at the East Rapids, Mich., home was read. It thanked the auxiliary for the children's Christmas gifts, sent by Mrs. Mary T. Moore.

Reports included one by Mrs. Rosalie Sites, on the Christmas party at Baker VA Center, where she visited 58 patients and distributed $150.51 worth of gifts, fruit cake and cookies. Mrs. Nave told of the success of the candy sale; and Mrs. Goldie Martin of the 200 underprivileged children attending the Christmas party. Mrs. Ethel Ritchie was reported ill. The prize for the evening was won by Mrs. Rosalie Everstine, who read a poem, "I'm Fine."

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is a delicate problem and I need to know how to handle it — or should it be handled at all?

Our 12-year-old daughter is a born do-gooder — always looking for someone to help. Yesterday Mary came home from school and told me about a new girl in her room who is very nice. The new girl's father brings her to school every morning in a beat-up truck. Mary said, "Her Daddy wears overalls so I know he doesn't work in an office or anything like that."

The new girl has very bad teeth. Even the ones in front are decayed. When she smiles she always puts her hand up to her mouth which indicates she is self-conscious about it.

My husband is a dentist. Mary has asked her dad if he will fix the girl's teeth without pay. My husband said he would. Now, how do we go about it? Should I call the girl's mother? Should my daughter ask the girl directly? Or should we not get involved?

—MARY'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Speak to the teacher. Ask her to contact the new girl's mother and give her the information. The child need not know it's "a gift." And, incidentally, you are raising an admirable daughter.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a photo-nut. He spends hundreds of dollars on equipment, chemicals, paper, film and so on. His photos are terrific, too.

My beef is this: At every family gathering (and we are a mighty gathering family) he shoots dozens of pictures. Then he slaves for hours making prints. The relatives can well afford to pay 50c apiece for these wonderful 5x7 and 8x10 pictures. But my hard-headed husband says, "No, I wouldn't think of charging them. I do this for fun."

Fun, my eye. He does it with money that could be better spent buying nicer clothing for his family or fixing up our house. Why should he be so balky about asking the relatives to pay for prints? I think he is a sucker. What do you think?

—HYPO HARRIET, THE LENSHOUND'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: The lenshound sounds like a sweet guy who enjoys his hobby, so why don't you keep your nose out of his hydroquinone? If he tried to sell his pictures it would no longer be a hobby — it would be a business.

The relatives ought to buy him a little gift for his time and trouble . . . or better still, they should get together and buy him a BIG gift for his years of generosity.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell me if it is socially correct for a woman to help a man put on his coat — someone who is not her husband, that is. I did this recently for a guest in our home. His wife gave me a withering look. My husband later told me I had done something equivalent to eating peas off a knife.

The next day I asked a close friend whether or not this was wrong and she said it was a bad social boner because I had put myself in a class with a servant.

I am still not 100% convinced. Can you settle this please?

—UNCOMFORTABLE

DEAR UNCOMFORTABLE: Good manners is common sense and consideration for others. If you can help a man by holding his coat, I say go ahead and do it.

Confidential to View From the Audience: Women who appear on a public platform should sit with their legs crossed at the ankle rather than at the knees. Short, slim skirts adds to the problem. A sweater, wrap or a stole across the knees can be helpful.

Are your parents too strict? You can benefit from the experiences of thousands of teenagers if you write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Cumberland Truck Firm Fined $340

KEYSER — Bowling Truckers, Inc., of Cumberland was fined $340.50 yesterday by Justice of Peace Madlyn Bazzle after being found guilty of a truck overweight charge.

The truck was hauling coal and was 6,200 pounds overweight, according to W. Va. State Trooper Robert E. Noechel, who arrested the driver, Allen Preston Duling, of Junction, after the truck was weighed by a checking crew.

Two other trucks hauling salt to the District 5 offices of the W. Va. State Roads Commission here have been impounded until fines and costs are paid in two other overweight convictions handed down by Miss Bazzle.

One of the trucks, owned and driven by Michael A. Kocis, of Sharon, Pa., was found to be 8,750 pounds overweight. Fine and costs totaled $468.

The other, owned and driven by Clyde E. Coyer, of Slippery Rock, Pa., was 9,950 pounds overweight. He was fined $528.

Debbie Reynolds Writes Book "If I Knew Then" Which Outlines Her Part In Hollywood Triangle

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Debbie Reynolds discloses in a new book feelings about losing husband Eddie Fisher to Elizabeth Taylor.

She didn't feel like living, writes Miss Reynolds—"but I had two good reasons for wanting to live—my children."

The actress had been silent about her part in Hollywood's most famous triangle in recent years. Now she discusses how she felt when Fisher left her, writing in "If I Knew Then," a book of advice to girls and women based on her own experiences.

How does a woman feel when her husband walks out? Miss Reynolds comments: "You exist. You wake up one morning and you have a different life from the one you had yesterday. It is a life you don't like. But you must live it.

"You keep busy. You must keep busy so you won't think. Every hour of the day must be occupied and part of the night because you won't be able to sleep. If you are lucky, you have a job to keep you busy. It should be time-consuming and exhausting. It will help keep your mind off them.

"You try to think straight, but you can't. Your world has been turned upside down and you can't get your bearings. You react instead of act. You have been hurt, so your first instinct is to hurt back. Afterwards you realize you have wanted to behave in a childish and immature way, and you are ashamed of that emotion.

"You must consider your life with him dead. If he lives on in your mind, the memory can only punish you. You must decide he is no longer a part of your life—that chapter is closed, finished. The average woman has an easier time doing this; it is more difficult if you live in a spotlight. Then his deeds and words will be in print for you to read. Again you feel the hurt."

She writes that the process takes a year and a half: "The heartache is gone, but it has left an after effect. You try not to be disillusioned and suspicious, but it's not easy. Young men especially seem to be untrustworthy. The stability of a mature man is more attractive."

The actress chose shoe magnate Harry Karl for her second husband; he was 18 years her senior. Fisher married and later separated from Miss Taylor after the latter's much-publicized fling with actor Richard Burton.

Miss Reynolds' book, written with Associated Press Hollywood columnist Bob Thomas, also is an autobiography of sorts, chronicling in lively style her adventures between her birthplace in El Paso, Tex., and her present position as a top comedienne.

Between anecdotes, she dispenses advice for the younger set on dating and parents, grooming and dress, even sex.

Bomb Hurled At President Of Ghana

LONDON (AP)—A bomb was hurled into a crowd leaving a political rally attended by President Kwame Nkrumah Monday, Accra Radio reported early Wednesday. It said the blast had wounded a number of persons but did not say whether Nkrumah was among them.

One man was arrested, reported the broadcast authorized by the Ghana Interior Ministry.

Accra Radio said the bomb had been hurled as 20,000 persons filed out of the Accra Sports Stadium after a rally commemorating the 13th anniversary of Nkrumah's Positive Action movement.

The president earlier had marched at the head of a mile-long procession of singing and shouting supporters.

Ghana still is under a state of emergency ordered last Sept. 22 after a series of bombings, including an abortive attempt on Nkrumah's life Aug. 1 when a bomb went off near his car.

Nkrumah later blamed so-called dissident reactionaries, imperialists, and neocolonialists for a series of six bombings in which he said 15 persons had been killed and 256 injured.

Deke Slayton Named Chief Of Astronauts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space agency disclosed this week it has named Air Force Maj. Donald K. (Deke) Slayton, 38, its "chief astronaut." His principal duty is helping nine new space pilots selected last September learn the ropes.

A spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said that Slayton, who was barred from space flights because of a heart condition, also makes assignments for the other six members of the original Project Mercury astronaut team.

Other duties include keeping records and handling administration.

NASA had said previously that Slayton would be coordinator of astronaut activities but had not used the term chief astronaut.

Italy's Four Parties Reach Agreement

ROME (AP) — The leaders of Italy's four coalition parties found a basis this week for compromising differences that threaten Premier Amintore Fanfani's left-leaning government. But the powerful Socialist party balked at making commitments.

At a long meeting, the Christian Democrats and two other moderate coalition parties—the Republicans and the Democratic Socialists—each gave ground on troublesome issues concerning electric power nationalization and regional governments within Italy.

But Socialist party leader Pietro Nenni said only that he would turn proposals over to his party's central committee. The three other parties said they will consider Socialist reaction while pressing their own party ranks to accept tentative decisions.

Fanfani appeared satisfied with the meeting's results, and the impression was that he could count on continuing his present Cabinet until national elections some time before May.

Debbie Reynolds Writes Book "If I Knew Then" Which Outlines Her Part In Hollywood Triangle

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Debbie Reynolds discloses in a new book feelings about losing husband Eddie Fisher to Elizabeth Taylor.

She didn't feel like living, writes Miss Reynolds—"but I had two good reasons for wanting to live—my children."

The actress had been silent about her part in Hollywood's most famous triangle in recent years. Now she discusses how she felt when Fisher left her, writing in "If I Knew Then," a book of advice to girls and women based on her own experiences.

How does a woman feel when her husband walks out? Miss Reynolds comments: "You exist. You wake up one morning and you have a different life from the one you had yesterday. It is a life you don't like. But you must live it.

"You keep busy. You must keep busy so you won't think. Every hour of the day must be occupied and part of the night because you won't be able to sleep. If you are lucky, you have a job to keep you busy. It should be time-consuming and exhausting. It will help keep your mind off them.

"You try to think straight, but you can't'. Your world has been turned upside down and you can't get your bearings. You react instead of act. You have been hurt, so your first instinct is to hurt back. Afterwards you realize you have wanted to behave in a childish and immature way, and you are ashamed of that emotion.

"You must consider your life with him dead. If he lives on in your mind, the memory can only punish you. You must decide he is no longer a part of your life—that chapter is closed, finished. The average woman has an easier time doing this; it is more difficult if you live in a spotlight. Then his deeds and words will be in print for you to read. Again you feel the hurt."

She writes that the process takes a year and a half: "The heartache is gone, but it has left an after effect. You try not to be disillusioned and suspicious, but it's not easy. Young men especially seem to be untrustworthy. The stability of a mature man is more attractive."

The actress chose shoe magnate Harry Karl for her second husband; he was 18 years her senior. Fisher married and later separated from Miss Taylor after the latter's much-publicized fling with actor Richard Burton.

Miss Reynolds' book, written with Associated Press Hollywood columnist Bob Thomas, also is an autobiography of sorts, chronicling in lively style her adventures between her birthplace in El Paso, Tex., and her present position as a top comedienne.

Between anecdotes, she dispenses advice for the younger set on dating and parents, grooming and dress, even sex.

Bomb Hurled At President Of Ghana

LONDON (AP)—A bomb was hurled into a crowd leaving a political rally attended by President Kwame Nkrumah Monday, Accra Radio reported early Wednesday. It said the blast had wounded a number of persons but did not say whether Nkrumah was among them.

One man was arrested, reported the broadcast authorized by the Ghana Interior Ministry.

Accra Radio said the bomb had been hurled as 20,000 persons filed out of the Accra Sports Stadium after a rally commemorating the 13th anniversary of Nkrumah's Positive Action movement.

The president earlier had marched at the head of a mile-long procession of singing and shouting supporters.

Ghana still is under a state of emergency ordered last Sept. 22 after a series of bombings, including an abortive attempt on Nkrumah's life Aug. 1 when a bomb went off near his car.

Nkrumah later blamed so-called dissident reactionaries, imperialists, and neocolonialists for a series of six bombings in which he said 15 persons had been killed and 256 injured.

DeGaulle Is Taking Time On U. S. Polaris Offer

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle may take two to three months before deciding whether to accept the U. S. Polaris missile offer, French government sources said.

In the meantime a meeting between De Gaulle and President Kennedy appeared unlikely. De Gaulle would welcome such a talk but only if it could produce results.

In a preliminary reply to Washington last week, De Gaulle intimated his willingness to discuss the Polaris offer. But he stated his firm determination to go ahead with plans for an independent French nuclear striking force.

De Gaulle reiterated this in a 40-minute talk with U. S. Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen last Friday.

More Italian Hotels

ROME (AP) — Europe's rising tourist trade has been a boon for Italian innkeepers. Since 1949 the number of hotels in the nation has jumped from 20,000 to more than 33,000, a spurt of more than 66 per cent.

The plumbing has improved too. There were only 34,381 hotel bathrooms in 1949 compared to about 167,000 today—a whopping 385 per cent increase.

Brazilians Vote Confidence In Pres. Goulart

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Flushed by an overwhelming vote of public confidence, President Jaoa Goulart has started laying his plans for a new Cabinet to rule with him in the return of a strong presidential system to Brazil. Political opponents warned him against a strong-man takeover in the style of the late dictator Getulio Vargas.

Latest unofficial returns from a plebiscite Sunday showed more than 5 million Brazilians voted to throw out a 16-month-old parliamentary system of government. The tabulations show one million favored retaining it.

Goulart, chief of the Brazilian Labor party, will pick a Cabinet to replace the present one headed by Prime Minister Hermes Lima, who must resign Jan. 31. The New Cabinet will continue to be headed by a prime minister until Congress acts on the plebiscite results. Its deadline for action is April 7. If it fails to act, the parliamentary system is automatically revoked.

Planning Commission To Meet January 22

The Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission will meet Tuesday, January 22, at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

The meeting was originally set for January 15, according to James A. Avirett, who is serving as vice chairman during the illness of George O. Hollar, chairman.

A United Europe

STRASBOURG, France (AP)—Seventy-two per cent of Frenchmen favor a united Europe, according to an opinion poll recently conducted among common market countries.

Twenty-four per cent of Frenchmen polled were "strongly in favor" of any efforts to unify Europe, and 44 per cent gave mere approbation. Eight per cent were against and 20 per cent gave no opinion.

Holland had the highest percentage of unity proponents, 87. Eighty-one per cent of Germans polled gave a positive response. The people of Luxembourg seemed little interested, with 68 per cent giving no opinion. Belgium showed 65 per cent for unification, and Italy 60 per cent in favor.

U.S. To Make First Round Trip To Moon

BERLIN (UPI) — Wernher von Braun, head of the American space research program, predicted Tuesday the United States will beat the Russians to the moon and back.

"I am convinced personally that the Russians will not succeed in making a manned space flight to the moon and back before the Americans," he told newsmen.

"The Russians now could send a man to the moon but that would be a one-way trip."

Braun returned to Germany to get an honorary doctor's degree from West Berlin's Technical University in recognition of his rocket and space research.

He began his rocket research in Berlin as a youth and worked on the V1 and V2 rockets used by the Germans in World War II.

Braun now is director of the George C. Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala.

Pennsylvania State Police Seize Fake Lottery Tickets In Printing Plant Raid

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — State police raided the Industrial Press Co. plant here, arrested two men on gambling charges and seized alleged fake sweepstakes tickets estimated in the millions.

State Police Commissioner Frank P. McCartney said the office was the source of the largest lottery operation in the United States outside of the Irish Sweepstakes.

Arrested were Murray Baker, 38, Miami, Fla., identified by authorities as the son of Lou Cohen. Cohen was described by McCartney as the alleged king of lottery operators in the United States for 40 years up to the time of his death in 1952.

Also arrested was Victor O. Gatts, 48, of nearby Camp Hill, identified as a printer.

Raiders confiscated one million tickets reputed to represent a lottery sponsored by the Republic of Haiti but which, authorities said, had no connection with that country. Police said the tickets sold for $2 each and offered a first prize of $75,000 based on the winner of the Kentucky Derby next May.

Some 40,000 other tickets, called the Free America Sweepstakes, were seized. They bore the inscription "Free American Sweepstakes, Association" and were based on treasury balances. McCartney said they also offered a $75,000 first prize.

The state police commissioner said this bundle was slated for grocery stores in New England. He said the tickets were offered routinely by retailers as premiums for each $5 purchase. He said no prize was ever paid on these tickets.

McCartney said the proceeds from the Haiti tickets were sent by purchasers to a post office box in Haiti where the money was picked up by a confederate of Baker's.

The police also seized printing plates which they said were used to print lottery tickets based on the International race which was run last October at Laurel race track in Maryland and offering a $75,000 first prize.

Maryland News Briefs

CENTREVILLE, Md. (AP) — A decision probably will be made by next Tuesday on a rezoning request by United Nuclear Corp., says Grayson Chance, president of the Board of Queen Annes County Commissioners.

Chance said Wednesday that members of the board wanted to study the transcript of Monday's day-long hearing on the rezoning petition before making a decision.

United Nuclear wants 800 to 1,000 acres of a tract at Pioneer Point rezoned from farming to business. If the request is granted, the firm would move its headquarters from Santa Fe, N.M., to the Queen Annes County site.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marylanders have been urged not to file income tax reports until after Congress has acted on a bill that would permit deductions for taxes on ground rents.

Rep. Samuel N. Friedel, D-Md., who is sponsoring the bill, advised homeowners to delay filing income tax reports. He said Rep. Wilbur Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has promised an early hearing.

Legal Gaming Devices Less Numerous Than Illegal Machines, IRS Reports

BALTIMORE (AP) — There are fewer places maintaining gaming devices in the four southern Maryland counties where gambling is legal than in Baltimore City where gambling is barred.

The Internal Revenue Service has listed the number of proprietors to which it has sold stamps for the machines. The IRS considers any machine a gaming device if it can be used or is being used for gambling.

In Anne Arundel, Calvert, Charles and St. Marys counties, where gambling is legal, 1,127 places bought the required stamps. Baltimore City machine operators bought stamps for 1,253 places.

A list of the location of all stamp-bearing slot and pinball machines is being compiled by the State Police. Capt. Thomas S. Smith, head of the anti-rackets unit, said the police want to be ready in case the legislature outlaws the machines.

The IRS table of businesses having one or more gaming machines shows:

Baltimore City 1,253, Anne Arundel 598, Baltimore County 318, Charles 217, St. Marys 196, Calvert 116, Prince Georges 112, Washington 64, Frederick 63, Harford 53, Dorchester 46, Carroll 43, Wicomico 39, Cecil 31, Worcester 22, Somerset 21, Queen Annes 20, Allegany 14, Kent 11, Talbot 11, Caroline 7, Howard 7.

Garrett and Montgomery counties are the only two counties in the state without gaming machines.

The Bad Lands of South Dakota comprise about one million acres, with fossil deposits.

Robert Frost Critically Ill

BOSTON (UPI) — Critically ill Robert Frost was described as resting comfortably but somewhat tired Wednesday after undergoing surgery aimed at stopping blood clots which threaten his life.

Dr. F. Lloyd Mussels, director of Peter Bent Brigham Hospital said that Frost was "understandably" a bit tired after his minor surgery Tuesday.

"His doctors are hopeful that tying off major leg veins will prevent further circulation of clots from the legs which might affect vital organs."

The 88-year-old poet was hospitalized Dec. 10 for an obstruction of the urinary tract. He subsequently suffered a heart attack and since then has had considerable difficulty with pulmonary embolisms — clots traveling to the lungs.

You can minimize dark circles and puffiness around the eyes with these methods and aids!

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Banishing Dark Circles, Puffiness Around Eyes

Sometimes unwanted eye shadows are due to underpar health. Very often, however, they befall the healthiest miss. For her the path to increased beauty lies in getting as much fresh air, exercise and sleep as she can get. The combination increases circulation and relaxation, both fleet chasers of circles, rudely routing them out of their stolen berths.

Any woman plagued by puffiness as well as circles will find the above advice to teens sound wisdom for herself. Couple it with the following systematic treatment and, given good health, the trouble will be greatly alleviated.

Before retiring, pat oil or eye cream around the eyes. While dressing each morning and before dinner, apply compresses. Make them of cotton in a half-moon shape. Wring them out in icy water and witch hazel or astringent. Fit and smooth them over the dark or puffy circles like a second skin.

When you get the knack, they will stay on until your dressing is finished. If, however, you'd like to prolong the treatment through morning chores, a tie-on mask, slit for seeing, will aid your purpose and is available at most cosmetic counters. In either case, on removal, the swelling and shadows will appear pleasingly and noticeably less.

Makeup can also be brought to your aid. The new under-foundation, muscle "lifts" and "straps" and a shadow-lightening cream are worth your investigation and experimentation along with the more familiar cover-up varieties.

The two simplest, quickest and cheapest circle removers are these: As surely as blue and red make purple, never let your rouge overlap your circles. As a shadow cast from a lowered brow can undo all your good work, always hold your head high — higher — highest. Only a queenly pose will suit it anyway, after you have followed these tips!

Two Polaris Subs Will Be Launched

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two more Polaris-firing submarines will be launched Saturday, the Navy said.

The Nathan Hale will be sent down the way at the yards of the Electric Boat Division, General Dynamics Corp., Groton, Conn.

The John Adams will be launched at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in New Hampshire.

Both are of the advanced Lafayette class, 425 feet long and displacing 7,000 tons fully loaded. They will be nuclear powered and will mount 16 missiles each.

With the launchings, the Navy will have nine Polaris submarines with the fleet, one in commission but not yet sent out on patrol, seven launched and 18 more building or authorized.

JFK Tabs Nephew Presidential Timber

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has tabbed one of his nephews fondly as presidential timber and the evidence, on Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy's office wall, has become quite a conversation piece.

It is a photograph of David, 7, one of the attorney general's sons, sitting beside the pool on the White House south grounds. It bears this hand-written inscription by David's uncle John F., present occupant of the mansion: "A future president inspects his property."

It's not wholly clear just what property is meant. David's back is to the executive mansion, and the easiest thing for him to inspect from his position would be the denizens of the duck pond, in front of him.

Tree Pickup Continues

Officials of the R&R Sanitation Company said that the pickup of Christmas trees will continue today and tomorrow with the regular garbage runs of the firm's trucks.

North Cumberland will be serviced this evening and South Cumberland tomorrow night.

Trees are to be placed at the curbs so as to facilitate fast handling.

Sweden was the first country to set up an institute of race-biology.

Democratic House Leader Predicts Big Accomplishments

Bolstered by mid-term election victories, the Democratic majority in the 88th Congress should accomplish much for President Kennedy in the view of the party's floor leader in the House.

By Rep. Carl Albert, D-Okla.
Written for UPI

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 87th Congress accomplished an historic record; the 88th Congress shows promise of doing even more.

The record of the last Congress was vindicated by the American electorate in last November's elections. The 1962 Democratic victory expressed the voters' recognition that the 87th Congress strengthened the Nation's economy, bolstered its armed power, and resolutely attacked the many, baffling problems of the 1960's.

The new Congress now, more than ever, has a mandate from the American people to carry out the program of the Kennedy Administration and of the Democratic Party in Congress.

The recent Democratic electoral victory showed a strong exception to a general, historic rule of American politics. This rule holds that the President's party, in mid-term elections, normally loses seven or eight Senate seats; in 1962 the Democrats gained four. The rule also holds that the President's party loses between thirty and forty House seats; in 1962 the Republicans gained only two.

President Kennedy held his support in Congress where other Presidents have lost.

Such support undoubtedly will be an incentive to the next Congress.

Great issues will confront the coming Congress. The drama of the Cuban crisis and the bi-partisan support that Congress has given the President during the crisis point up the responsibilities that Congress shares in foreign affairs.

The last Congress appropriated over $48 billion for defense, the largest amount in peacetime history. And, to strengthen the political, economic, and moral stature of the United States in the world community of nations, the 87th Congress enacted memorable legislation to increase trade between our free neighbors and outselves, and to aid free nations less fortunate than ours. The 88th Congress will necessarily have the chance to build upon its predecessor's accomplishments in defense, trade, and foreign aid.

Most recently we have heard preliminaries of debate on proposed tax cuts and tax reforms. On questions such as these, American prosperity depends. The last Congress did much to reverse the recession that our Nation was heading into during the late 1950's by passing legislation such as the Tax Adjustment Act of 1962, the Area Redevelopment Act of 1961, the Manpower Retraining Act of 1962, and the Public Works Acceleration Act of 1962. The 88th Congress will seek to buttress prosperity gained, in part, through the legislative programs of 1961 and 1962.

Under the splendid leadership of Speaker John W. McCormack and that of his predecessor, the late Sam Rayburn during most of the first session, the 87th Congress enacted the bulk of President Kennedy's program. I predict we will do even better in the 88th.

Dam Construction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Interior Department has awarded an $85.9 million contract for construction of the San Luis Dam in California. Sen. Clair Engle, D-Calif., announced. The contract went to Morrison-Knudsen, Inc.; Utah Construction and Mining Co. and Brown and Root, Inc. Boise Idaho, was given as the address of all three firms.

Wins Permanent

HERTFORD, England (UPI) — Harold Hunt, who is bald, won a home permanent outfit in a raffle.

Singer Buys Firm

NEW YORK (UPI) — Singer Manufacturing Co. announced it has agreed to acquire Sensitive Research Instrument Corp. of New Rochelle for an undisclosed amount of cash. Sensitive, which had sales of $3 million in 1962, will have its facilities moved to Bridgeport to join the Singer metrics division plant after the transaction is completed, the announcement said.

Gets Contract

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Lear Siegler, Inc., announced it has received an initial $7.3 million contract for guidance reference and bombing systems for F-4C tactical fighter plane. The contract is from McDonnell Aircraft Corp.

Too Shiny

CHICHESTER, England (UPI) — The City Planning Commission said it has asked a shore store to change a new $1,400 marble front because the marble was too shiny for an old city like Chichester.

Brazil's Trumai Indians believe the sun created all tribes except the neighboring Suya, who are descended from snakes. The Suya, a people of the Xingu River, were greatly feared until they made a peaceful contact with the outside world in 1959.

FALSE TEETH
That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Hold false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug counter.

Dirksen Sees Major Issues

"It is the function of the opposition party to oppose unsound proposals . . . " With these words the Senate Republican leader charts the course he expects his party to follow in the 88th Congress, which had not yet convened when this was written for UPI.

By Sen Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill.
Written for United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Soon the 88th Congress will convene. Its political and organization structure will not be materially different from that of its predecessor, the 87th. Committee chairmen will remain, committee ratios will be slightly modified and most of the problems and challenges will follow past patterns.

Both Congress and the Executive will be confronted with a world still fevered and confused. Set a finger on any part of the world map and there you find unrest or turmoil. Whether it be Berlin or Cuba, Laos or Vietnam, India or Iraq, Borneo or Morocco, we are in some way committed, involved, affected or concerned.

These problems will have varying impact upon our defense, aid, or economic policies. A cold peace will be as vexing as a cold war, and widespread nuclear fears will persist.

With these problems before us, the Republicans in Congress will, I believe, be disposed toward an operational course designed to preserve and maintain our solvency, security, private initiative, freedom from undue intrusion in people's affairs, and the avoidance of any economic dislocation.

In operational terms, it will mean a brake on spending, especially so if a tax cut is approved; an effort to find a more effective and equitable farm program; a hard look at the size and effectiveness of the foreign aid program; a re-examination of our commitments under the Alliance For Progress in Latin America; a thorough examination of the proposal for federal aid to education if it comes up for further consideration; reconsideration of anti - trust and merger policies which are scarcely suited to an age of Big Labor, Big Business and Big Government; a survey of operations under the Kerr-Mills Act for medical aid to the aged to determine what amendments, if any, may be required; a follow-through on the unresolved matters stemming from the continuing Cuban crisis; better minority staffing; a more effective use of the General Accounting Office in pursuing the elimination of waste and extravagance; an effective way to implement the recommendations made by the first and second Hoover Commissions; a thorough examination of the principal trust accounts, such as social security, railroad retirement and civil service retirement, to determine their solvency and actuarial soundness; and, finally, work stoppages in defense plants.

There will be other matters, of course, but taxes and spending are certain to receive major emphasis. It is the function of the opposition party to oppose unsound proposals, to support meas-

Regional Apple Sales Vary

The apple shipping picture in this section of the Appalachian fruit growing area is one of marked contrast, a check of the largest shippers revealed yesterday.

Consolidated Fruit Sales Inc., the sales end of Consolidated Orchard Company which grows apples in Allegany, Morgan and Hampshire counties, and for Hampshire Orchards, Romney, has reported a good season this year.

Consolidated is one of the ten largest shippers of apples in the nation and specializes in fresh pack boxes on demand.

Fruit is picked during harvest season and stored in the big cold storage buildings at Paw Paw. Upon order, fresh packs are shipped.

Industry Growing

ROME, Italy (AP)—Italian industry blooms along. The nation's general industrial production index (based on 100 for 1953) hit 220.2 for the month of September, an increase of 3.9 per cent over September, 1961.

Henry W. Miller, president of Consolidated, said the packing house had been running at capacity, with considerable overtime just before the longshoremen's strike.

That enabled the company to get off many boxes of apples to its many export markets.

Distribution this year has been widened to Dallas, Texas, where a new outlet has been obtained. The Atlantic Coast markets are covered from Philadelphia to Miami.

In the meantime, Mountain Fruit Sales Inc., the largest Hampshire County apple cooperative, reports that while there was a normal response for Christmas apples, the movement all fall has been below normal.

R. L. Sumner, manager, reported that the shipments this year have been 21 per cent below 1961 and 19 per cent below 1960.

The Washington State production however, is 42 per cent above normal, and the Mid-West movement is three per cent above normal.

This is a year, he said, when the cooperative's apples must compete with local growers as supplies in Indiana, Ohio and Missouri, for instance, were abundant this fall.

'Holed Up' Fugitive

ROME (AP) — Police finally discovered why they could never find Pietro Anselmi at home in the six months he had been wanted on a charge of purse-snatching.

"He might as well have slipped down the drain each time we rang the doorbell," one policeman remarked. It seemed unlikely, but next time police checked on him they gave the bathroom a good going over.

There they found him, in a hollow he had tunneled out under the tiled flooring beneath the bathtub. He was breathing through a plastic tube stuck up through the plumbing.

Blood flows through the brain of a child faster than it does in an adult.

Morgan Heads Celanese Plant

Garner K. Morgan, formerly employed at the Amcelle plant of Celanese Fibers Company, has been appointed manager of the Belvidere, N. J., plant of Celanese Polymer Company, a division of Celanese Corporation of America.

The Belvidere plant produces cellulose acetate and cellulose propionate molding materials.

Morgan had been director of quality control and manufacturing development of the Celanese Plastics Company, Newark, N. J.

He joined Celanese in 1949 as a chemist, and served as development engineer, quality control engineer, area supervisor and then superintendent of extrusion manufacturing at the Amcelle plant.

Morgan is a native West Virginian. He was born in Big Four, brought up in Princeton, W. Va., and was graduated from Concord College, W. Va., where he received a B.S. degree in 1948.

During the Korean War, he served in the Army as chief chemist for the Quartermaster Board Chemical Laboratory at Fort Lee, Va.

Report Given On Sewage Regulations

C. Lee Renaud, director of the Allegany County Planning and Zoning Commission, Tuesday presented a report to the county commissioners in regard to regulations governing water supply and sewage systems in the subdivision of land in Maryland.

The regulations proposed by the State Health Department will be discussed by interested parties at a meeting early next month in Baltimore.

Renaud stated that regulations were reviewed from the standpoint of their coordination with existing and proposed planning tools such as zoning and subdivision regulations. The staff of the Planning Commission made several suggestions in the preliminary draft of these regulations, which were distributed last June, 1962, he said. These comments were forwarded to the local and state health departments, some of which were incorporated in the final draft. It was pointed out that the final draft of these regulations by the State Health Department would in no way conflict with the subdivision regulations that are being proposed by the Planning Commission but would provide a valuable supplement to them, he added.

Renaud explained that the State Health Department regulations outline the minimum requirements of the state agency for water supply and sewage disposal installations on a lot in a land development. Subdivision regulations of the Planning Commission, generally speaking, require that plats be recorded before lots are sold, establishes minimum standards of design, assures the installation of adequate improvements, and guarantees the conformance of all lots to zoning requirements, he pointed out.

They eliminate haphazard development in the future and provide advantages to all concerned, he said. Renaud listed the benefits.

To the homeowner: By insuring adequate streets, lot area, utilities, building set-back and uniformity of development.

To the subdivider: By providing standards of design and improvements a better market is created for the sale of land.

To the community: By guaranteeing the installation of improvements which would require less maintenance in the future, and provide more tax funds that can be used for other needs.

To existing residents: By providing standards of development and promoting good design the homes will have a higher property value and long life.

Subdivision regulations will encourage the accomplishment of the most effective use of land for a coordinated development which will, among other things, best promote the health, safety, and the general welfare of the residents of Allegany County, Renaud told the board.

Verdi Festival Set

ROME, Italy (AP) — Rome's opera company is planning to make the 1963 season a special festival in honor of Giuseppe Verdi. It will be the 150th anniversary of the birth of the composer, who wrote "Aida," "Rigoletto" and "Il" Troviators."

Hair Is Valuable Crop

LONDON (AP)—In England the price of the best European blonde hair has skyrocketed to 125 pounds ($350) per pound because of the current fad for women's wigs. Even when wigs were mostly for actors, or for people with hair problems, European peasant girls used to sell their hair for hairpin-money to a buyer who came around with bell, cart and scissors. Before wigs became high-fashion, the price was less than $5 per pound.

The European cuckoo lays its eggs in other birds' nests and leaves them to be hatched by other birds.

Inspection Will Have Bearing On Future County Jail Plans

A thorough inspection was made yesterday of the Allegany County Jail by Sheriff Paul C. Heberlein and County Commissioner Robert Little Ebert with several local contractors.

The jail property is in need of many repairs and replacement of wiring, plumbing, sanitation facilities and heating plant, according to Sheriff Haberlein.

The check of the property was made to determine if the renovation and repairs cited should be made or else some thought be given to building a new county jail facility, the sheriff stated.

The county jail, which dates back many years, has been the subject of many grand jury suggestions for replacement and there have been reports by the state inspector of jails that the building be either replaced or modernized.

One suggestion from the state inspector is that Garrett County and Allegany County join in operation of a lockup for both counties. The jail for both counties would be located in Cumberland.

Some months ago the sheriff appeared before the county commissioners to ask that new security type windows be installed and a new cell tier be planned to replace the worn and outdated cells now in use.

The sheriff at that time cited a jail break attempt in which bars on the windows had been partially sawed through.

Commissioner Ebert will discuss the county jail situation with the other two members of the board, Commissioners Louis V. Shinnamon and Russell Carder so that some decision can be made on what action will be most feasible, the sheriff said.

Liquor Board Plans Hearing

A hearing will be held next Wednesday at 10 a. m. by the Allegany County Board of Alcoholic Beverage License Commissioners on the application for a Class D beer, wine and liquor permit by the White Oaks Shopping Center.

The application was made by Isadore Misler and George D. Zamias, both of Johnstown, who are the shopping center developers. The permit would be for both on and off sale.

Two groups have filed remonstrances against issuance of the permit. One by Memorial Heights Baptist Church, which owns a plot of land near the shopping center upon which the church plans to erect an edifice. The other remonstrance was filed by 13 residents near the shopping center.

The application filed with the liquor board states that the license sought is presently held by Anna D. Pannone on premises at 523 Virginia Avenue and known as Divico's Cafe.

B&O Plans Lower Rates On Coal Shipments April 1

Competition for "coal by wire" has been set up by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad by offering considerablely lower rates on trainload shipments of the fuel.

Jervis Langdon Jr., president of the railroad, said experimental runs show that the B&O can deliver coal to big plants in eastern metropolitan areas and return the empty cars to mineheads within seven days.

At the present, the coal car turn-around ranges up to 25 days.

The railroad is getting outright competition from steam power generating stations that are being built in the coal fields, and also the proposed coal pipeline that will carry slurry, a fine watered version, to the east coast generating plants.

Under the new plan upon which it has been experimenting since July, trainload customers will have rates up to 20 per cent lower on certain runs.

The rates would become effective April 1 provided there is no suspension by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The railroad's present 12-month coal shipment contracts expire on that date.

The 85-cent rate reduction will apply to shipments of 9,000 tons moved in trains of 120 to 130 cars.

The 70-cent reduction applies to 4,500-ton shipments moved in trains of 60 to 65 cars.

The new rates are the B&O's reply to proponents of a coal pipeline who have stated they can deliver fuel to electric utilities cheaper than any other form of transportation can do the job.

The B&O is offering its new, lower rates to any consumer in the East who wants to buy coal by the trainload.

Although it has not made quite as much of a production of it as some other roads, the B&O has been studying the "assembly train run" plan for more than a year to determine exactly what the operating costs are.

Langdon said the B&O undertook the "intensive study which led to these rate reductions because it realizes that the delivered price of bituminous steam coal will have to be reduced to remain fully competitive in the East."

The B&O's plan involves picking up loaded coal cars from the various mines, using an "assembly train run" technique. Once it has been assembled, the coal train will make its trip to an individual receiver without switching or other other interruptions.

The new rates go beyond the proposed reductions of some other Eastern railroads in that the B&O's rates would apply to all its mines, whether large, medium or small.

The trainload shipments consigned to individual receivers will be assembled at any one of several in the coal regions, points like Grafton, Cowen, M. & K. Junction and Fairmont, W. Va., and Rockwood, Pa.

The B&O president said discrimination against any coal producer is completely avoided under the B&O plan because large, medium-size and small mining companies can participate in the trainload rates.

The new rates will apply only if loading is completed at the mines within a 24-hour period and unloaded after arrival at the destination within 24-hours.

This provision is to insure that fast turn-arounds of equipment can be made, thereby enabling the B&O to make the widest use possible of its coal-car fleet and locomotives.

Powers To Assist Veterans Today

FROSTBURG — Frank T. Powers, a board member of the Maryland Veterans Commission, will be at the American Legion Home today at 7:30 p.m. to assist veterans and dependents in the completion of their annual income questionnaires.

Powers said the questionnaires must be returned to the VA by January 31 or pension benefits will be discontinued and an overpayment may result.

Any veteran who has not complied with this VA regulation should look into the matter as soon as possible, Powers said.

Britain Searches For A Balance

Rising unemployment and signs of a sagging economy have compelled the Bank of England to reduce its discount rate from 4½ to 4 per cent. The cut is the sixth since the summer of 1961 when the government increased the rate to 7 per cent in an austerity program designed to check excessive consumer spending.

Now the situation is reversed, last week's cut in the bank rate being one of a number of recent steps taken to stimulate the economy. Earlier, the government cut the sales tax on automobiles and home appliances and, similar to action taken in this country last fall, offered a tax inducement to business to spur capital spending.

The problem, in Britain as it is in the United States and other free countries, is to keep interest rates low enough to make funds available for domestic purposes and yet discourage the flow of short-term funds out of the country in search of higher yields.

The Bank of England's 4 per cent rate, which compares with the current 3 per cent in this country, is not expected to cause an exodus of foreign funds. Nor is it likely to attract funds from the United States. For this Washington must be thankful.

These Days

By John Chamberlain

Presidential Power

As we move into 1963 a White House spokesman—or "highest authority"—indicates that President John F. Kennedy has reflected profitably on the substance of two years' experience in dealing with Khrushchev. But the President, in facing a new Congress, has yet to prove that he is as quick to recognize domestic realities as he is to move with the necessities imposed by the Cold War.

The reason for the split in Kennedy's sense of realism is rooted in an odd paradox deriving from his basic commitments. When he moves outwardly from his deepest convictions, as he has been doing recently in his conduct of foreign affairs, he finds his way to an intelligent opportunism. But when he tries to be pragmatic on the basis of something that he does not feel strongly about, his awareness falters. Hence we witness a man who is least successful as an opportunist where he tries his hardest to be opportunistic.

Since I do not know J.F.K. personally, I offer this analysis somewhat tentatively. However, I once interviewed a number of people who were close to the Kennedys for a series I was writing on Presidential candidates, and my impressions as of 1960 have not been altered by events. My feeling then was that John F. Kennedy was a young man fervently committed to steering his country to a safe haven through the perils of the early atomic age. He would do what it takes at the waters' edge to confound the plans of foreign dictators. This commitment, hard and true, led him eventually to take the right stand in the Cuban situation in spite of misleading advice from the "softs."

When it comes to domestic questions, however, I have never had any feeling that the President has hard and fast convictions. He lacks the instincts and the attitudes of the zealous and frequently self-righteous reformers of the Nineteen Thirties, who wanted to lift Jane Addams's humanitarian Hull House right out of its Chicago slum and plant it down in Washington as a new wing to the White House. Kennedy was never really close to what Eleanor Roosevelt represented in the Democratic Party, which was one reason for Mrs. Roosevelt's original coolness toward his candidacy.

But if Kennedy came along too late in the day to reflect the emotional attitudes of the Harry Hopkins generation, he derives from a tradition of municipal politics which has always known how to give a quid (a Christmas turkey, a New Year's Day scuttle of coal) for a quo (a vote on election day).

Like any successful politician he knows he must have a power base if he is to maintain himself in office long enough to carry out some of the things he really feels strongly about. And in seeking to preserve his power base, he begins with the elements that made the Democratic Party of Franklin D. Roosevelt so successful.

The traditional Democratic power blocs include the big labor unions, the local followings of the old-time city bosses, the less successful—or the less fortunate—farmers, and the eggheads who believe that reform should be imposed from bureaus located on the Potomac. Directing all these horses in tandem, Franklin Roosevelt won four elections. In winning, he kept the Democratic South in his pocket despite his attitude toward old-line Southerners such as the late Senator Walter George of Georgia.

As a party leader who must look to the nature of his power base, Kennedy is still going through the motions of holding the Roosevelt coalition together. He pleases the centralizing humanitarians by his insistence on Medicare and Federal Aid to Education. He tries not to alienate Walter Reuther of the C.I.O. He makes the familiar gestures to ethnic groups, and he seeks to underwrite the agricultural price structure at a high level.

The question is, however, whether he has ever made the intellectual effort to comprehend the basic realignments of power groups in the affluent Nineteen Fifties and Sixties. Since Roosevelt's heyday a whole new middle class has come into being. That middle class can pay for its own medical insurance. It can finance its own local schools. Its paychecks have been coming in regularly, and it is sick of legislation that takes bigger and bigger cuts from weekly income. It does not mind a Social Security floor for old people, but it has no hankering to pay the inflationary bill that will be presented if that floor continues to gyrate upward toward the ceiling.

So it is a question whether the country, on balance, wants the President's proposed domestic legislation. Will a Kennedy who is keen about refurbishing the sources of his power take the hint before 1964?

Senator Humphrey Grants Double Interview On Latin America Trip

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — One of the grandsons to whom I sometimes write letters, has now grown to the age where he can understand government firsthand, rather than by mail; so, during the New Year's holiday, I took him up to the Senate of the United States.

"We're going to call on President Kennedy's assistant leader in the Senate," I explained.

"Is that Senator Byrd?" asked my grandson, who goes to school in Virginia, where Sen. Harry Byrd is supposed to run everything.

"No, it's Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota," I explained. "He once ran for president against Kennedy but is now helping Kennedy. He has just come back from Latin America, and I want to see whether he earned the taxpayers' money on his trip."

Senator Humphrey was more than equal to the double interview. He produced some photos of himself holding a live boa constrictor as one evidence that he hadn't wasted the taxpayers' money in Latin America.

"In Panama, the U. S. Army is conducting a school for guerrilla warfare in the jungles, and one thing they have to get used to is wild animals," Sen. Humphrey explained.

We couldn't tell from the photo whether the Senator or the snake looked the more unhappy.

"I suppose you were getting in training for guerrilla warfare with Barry Goldwater," I observed.

The Senator brushed this aside and went on to other snakes in South America, especially military leaders who have been undermining the Alliance for Progress.

Charley Bartlett Knew

"President Prado of Peru," he said, "was the man who, one day after Pearl Harbor, sent word to the United States asking what we wanted Peru to do.

"Yet the Peruvian army and navy, which we had trained and supported, kicked him out of office, using our Sherman tanks to do it. And during the Cuban crisis last fall, when we asked the Peruvian military to support us with the destroyers we had given them, they refused.

"Nevertheless," pointed out Senator Humphrey, "we recognized this military regime and have supported them with aid."

"Why?" asked my puzzled grandson.

"Because of the pressure of American business interests in Peru," was the reply. "Secretary of State Rusk was opposed, Assistant Secretary Ed Martin was opposed, and Ambassador Jim Loeb lost his job because he was opposed. But American business interests, except for L. E. Stalker, president of Sears, Roebuck, all pressured the White House for us to do business with the military. They got their way.

"The tip-off came, even before the State Department knew about it, from Charley Bartlett," continued the Senator, referring to JFK's press pal of Saturday Evening Post fame. "Bartlett told Ambassador Berkemeyer, 'Don't worry, your government's going to be recognized in a few days.' And it was."

Slow Alliance For Progress

The question of the Latin-American military had come up when I asked Humphrey about the slowness of the Alliance for Progress. He pointed out that the military neither understood nor wanted social reforms.

"In addition," he said, "the Alliance is being run by bankers and economists up here in Washington when it should be run by people with a heart.

"We're in a race against time as well as against Communism. The Communists don't have to worry about red tape. They pile the aid into Cuba for Castro, while we wait for a Grade 15 bureaucrat to send a task force to look over the housing program in Venezuela, and then wait for a Grade 17 bureaucrat to OK it, after which we wait some more while it goes on to the top.

"It's been one year since Kennedy was down in Venezuela promising them housing help. Up until a few weeks ago, nothing had happened," continued the Senator.

"They told me not to go into the slums of Caracas — it was dangerous. I went anyway. I played baseball with the kids and talked to them about the United States.

"I saw women working at night moulding cinder blocks to build new houses, working alongside their husbands. People are working. President Betancourt of Venezuela is doing a great job. So is President Lopez Mateos in Mexico. But they need guidance, not red tape, from the United States."

The Senator from Minnesota talked eloquently, with conviction and at some length.

"Neat guy," remarked my grandson after we departed. "Do you think he wasted the taxpayers' money?"

I allowed that he hadn't. There was a pause, then another question: "Did he really run for President against Kennedy?"

I explained that Humphrey had run as a Democrat in the Democratic primaries against Kennedy, and that under our system men could oppose each other and then work together for better government. Two factors, I explained, that helped to defeat Humphrey were lack of money and the reaction of some people to his rapid-fire method of talking.

"Maybe," concluded my grandson, "he just had a lot of important things to say."

Public Gets Wrong Impression Of Rules Fight

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — Yes, there is a Congress. It is composed of 435 Representatives and 100 Senators —all of them elected directly by the people of the United States.

For two months now, day after day, newspapers and television and radio have told of the activities of the President — conferences and speeches, statements on public policy and plans for legislative proposals. The country may have indeed gotten the impression that the President runs the government. Actually, the President proposes, but Congress disposes.

For, under a written constitution, the President cannot interfere with the operations of Congress as specified in that document, and Congress cannot interfere with the exercise of any constitutional power delegated to the President.

Yet, as the 88th Congress goes into its first session this week, the impression the country has been given by some news dispatches and radio and TV discussions is that the President is trying to tell Congress what rules it shall adopt for the size of its committees or for the length of its debates. Again and again, the Supreme Court has decided that these rules are solely within the power of Congress itself to prescribe.

The President constitutionally can have nothing to say about the fight over the Senate or House rules. He has no voice in such matters. Strictly speaking, it is unconstitutional for him to endeavor improperly to influence the votes of the members of either house on these questions, even though they may indirectly legislative proposals. The Constitution gives the President no right to lobby or to use his presidential office to secure the passage of legislation at any time, whether by the promise of or threats to withhold favors to members of Congress. He can recommend legislation to Congress, but he cannot coerce members of either house to vote as he demands.

This is important to the integrity of Democratic government today and in the future. Specifically, the House and Senate may each decide for itself how much a minority in its membership shall have. This is a function that cannot be legally tampered with from the outside.

The authority of the House Rules Committee to conduct its business is entirely independent of the merits of legislative proposals themselves. A bill can be pigeonholed in any committee by a majority of the committee. But the House can, by petition of a majority of the members, get a bill to the floor for action.

As for the anti-filibuster rule in the Senate, in some instances it makes little difference, theoretically, whether a two-thirds or a three-fifths majority is necessary to end debate. Actually, the measures that are debated at length often have better than a one-third minority against ending debate. Today, for example, the so-called conservative "coalition" draws votes from both parties. Nobody knows whether giving the power to three-fifths, or 60 members, of the Senate to end debate will make it any easier to get such a vote in specific instances than under the present rule requiring two-thirds, or 67 members, of the Senate. When issues become acute and only a narrow majority in the Senate itself is in favor of a measure, it isn't hard to pick up a few votes to keep a filibuster going. The right to debate amendments at length also gives the minority an opportunity to prolong the discussion by introducing new amendments, all of which can be debated thoroughly.

A controversy over the Senate rules has come up in recent years at the beginning of almost every session. No concrete legislative measures are usually being considered, though in the background generally is the "civil rights" issue. While the assumption is that only the Southerners are interested in this question, there are growing indications that Northern Senators find themselves concerned about limitation on debate and "gag rule."

Meanwhile, a lot of time will be used up on the rules problem in the first few days of the session. Oddly enough, if the rules are modified so as to diminish the rights of the minority in either the House or the Senate, this will be erroneously hailed in the headlines as a victory for the President. For he is not permitted under the Constitution to have a part in the making of the rules of either house. The reason for playing it up as a presidential victory or defeat is the assumption that back stage the Administration — in disregard of the Constitution — is using whatever influence it can command to cause members of Congress to vote as the White House dictates, rather than as they might really want to from the standpoint of their constituents.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

HEADQUARTERS—Washington is becoming the headquarters for everything. It is the base for the newest political organization — a "Students for Rockefeller" movement to further his presidential ambitions.

The movement was organized by a Washington youth, but it is unknown whether he has the backing or encouragement of the New York governor. To get the movement under way, the young man issued a press release which sounds more like a nominating speech than a public announcement. It reads:

"Rockefeller's student appeal has a broad base. As governor for the past four years, he has put New York State on a sound fiscal basis. He has not deviated from his position of fiscal responsibility for political expediency, even when under attack by both parties. Yet, he came out of the election with a 527,000 plurality."

There's more of the same, but you get the idea. Most recent presidential hopefuls have had a "student" movement behind them, either genuine or spurious. Rocky's is getting started early in the game—the elections are still two full years away.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS—Cuba has been in the headlines and on everybody's mind for some time, but Edwin Martin, assistant secretary of State for Latin American Affairs, didn't think it went this far!

Martin reports that he got a telephone call from the West Coast recently with an "important suggestion" on Cuba. His caller, who turned out to be a song writer, pointed out that a part of the Cuban problem was the inability of the State Department to reach the masses with the Cuban story.

To remedy this, the writer had composed a song—a Castro-go-home Cha Cha Cha—and actually sang the verses of it to the astonished Martin before he could recover his voice sufficiently to terminate the conversation.

The song writer was completely patriotic. He offered to give his brainchild, free and clear with no strings attached, to the U. S. government.

L'Affaire Daninos

By John Crosby

PARIS.

Well, the British have accepted Polaris in lieu of Skybolt, and l'affaire Daninos, which for a moment threatened war between France and America, has been amicably settled. You never heard of l'affaires Daninos? Well, settle back and listen. Far greater issues were at stake in l'affaires Daninos than in l'affaires Skybolt, and it tells much more of the state of modern civilization.

It was 1960, and Pierre Daninos the French humorist, was walking along 57th Street in Manhattan, his pockets jingling with American royalties when he spied a solid gold cigarette lighter in the window of Henri Bendel's store. It was expensive, $190, but as Mehitabel used to say, what the hell. He bought it.

A year passed, Daninos happily lighting the cigarettes of beautiful French girls with his lovely solid gold lighter. Then the spring on the gadget broke. Daninos gave the lighter to his friend, the American writer, John Tunis, and asked him to take it to Henri Bendel's and get it fixed. This is the French tradition, so foreign to our own. When something is busted, you get it fixed.

Presently there came a letter from Henri Bendel to Mr. Daninos: "We are sorry to advise you that despite all our many efforts to have the pocket lighter repaired, it is of on avail. The lighter is being returned under separate cover."

Mr. Tunis tried to explain to Mr. Daninos the American tradition: "This is one of the most aggravating things about the American merchant. They make things to sell, not to last. It is absurd and ridiculous that a country that can make an atom bomb cannot fix a cigarette lighter."

Mr. Daninos would not be put off. He was fond of the lighter, he was French. He wrote Henri Bendel's suggesting that, if the United States could not fix a cigarette lighter, they were not likely to land a man on the moon. Thus challenged, Henri Bendel put in charge of what rapidly became known as l'affaires Daninos Frank J. McIntosh, assistant to the president of Bendels.

"Vous avez raison," wrote Mr. McIntosh. "Somehow, some way, we will try again and again."

You can't say Bendel didn't try. They scoured Manhattan for six weeks, but no one could be found to repair a cigarette lighter. This says a great deal about the state of American civilization, all of which was said 25 years ago by Aldous Huxley in "Brave New World" and said all over again in all those books about planned obsolescence. But never had it been so nakedly put that the largest city in America could not find a single person to fix a cigarette lighter. This was the year the Polaris went on seat duty and we put a good many things in orbit.

Then Mr. McIntosh discovered the Elgin-American Co. of Elgin, Ill., which said it could and it would fix Mr. Daninos' lighter. Out to Elgin went the solid gold lighter, just in time to run into a strike. Packages piled up in the empty plant, including the lighter.

The president of Elgin American, A. B. Gellman, wrote to Mr. McIntosh: "Immediately after talking to you on the phone, a search was started for the solid gold cigarette lighter. So far we have not been able to locate it. Perhaps at a later date when we can resume service and repair department activities, we shall be able to take care of your lighter, assuming we can find it."

They never found it. A year had passed and tempers grew short. "Ou est mon briquet?" asked Daninos. Tunis demanded that Bendel's send a new briquet to Mr. Daninos. They couldn't. The lighter wasn't being made any more and there weren't any to be had. Ultimately a check went to soothe Mr. Daninos. A year-and-a-half had elapsed, during which we sent a rocket past Venus, sending data back by radio.

During World War II there was a saying: "The difficult we do immediately. The impossible takes a little longer." Today it need rewording: "The impossible we do immediately. The simple is impossible."

Some Food Habits Associated With Emotions

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Primitive warriors drank blood and gnawed the meat of wild animals in the mistaken belief it made them more powerful and aggressive. Meat still is symbolic of strength and energy. Athletes consume steaks and chops as though the strength of the butchered animal was transferred in every mouthful.

The same is true of many older men who believe they will be weak without red meat. Vegetables are considered more feminine, even though they may contain substitute proteins of comparable value.

According to Marion H. Zetterstrom, New York dietician, certain meanings have come to be associated with foods. Fruits symbolize love and affection. A basket of fruit is a common gift and the apple for the teacher is part of our culture. It is not clear to me just where the apple a day that keeps the doctor away fits in. Fruits also are associated with reproduction (fruition) and they are symbols of beauty, esteem, and luxury.

Dr. W. Kaufman believes certain foods have emotional significance. When a person is thwarted or frustrated, for example, he is likely to reach for reward or party foods such as chocolates, ice cream, nuts, cake, or hot dogs. Fetish foods are those many of us think we cannot do without; the athlete and his red meat is an example. Bread, the staff of life, is another and many food faddists have a long list of nutriments that fall into this category.

The maturity foods (beer, coffee, and tea) are items used by adults but denied to children. Milk and milk products are regarded as security foods because they help bind the early parent-child relationship. Most of us have consumed large amounts of a particular food on certain occasions when we feel a special need for emotional comfort.

We also have a private list of foods that remind us of happy circumstances and another list that has unpleasant associations. These include foods to which we develop aversions through religious or cultural upbringing or because they once caused a digestive upset.

INSECURE COUPLE

Mrs. D. writes: My husband and I both lack confidence. This hinders us in our social life and his work. Should we see a psychiatrist?

REPLY

Psychiatric care may uncover the cause of your insecurity and teach you to live within your limitations. But I doubt if it would make you more capable or add to your abilities.

NOSEBLEED ON RISING

S. M. writes: Lately, I am suffering from nosebleed on getting up in the morning. I'm 61. Can you tell me the cause?

REPLY

No, but your physician can. He will examine your nose to see whether a scratch, an ulcer, or a tumor is present, take the blood pressure recording, check your heart, and order blood tests to determine whether a bleeding tendency exists.

JAUNDICE IN NEWBORNS

W.D. writes: Why do some infants have jaundice at birth?

REPLY

Because of an incompatibility of blood between mother and child. There is no need for concern when the skin turns slightly yellow a few days after birth. This occurs so often in new babies it might be considered normal.

PROTECTION FROM FLU

L. P. writes: I had influenza last year. Does this mean I'm now immune to the disease?

REPLY

No, you may be immune to the particular flu bug you had last year but there are other types, each of which has different strains. If you were hit by virus B, for example, this year you could contract one of the strains of virus A, such as Asian flu. Why not be protected with flu shots?

TOMORROW: Oral reactions to allergens.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of diseases will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

Copy of a prayer discovered by a correspondent in a room at a Long Island inn: "Keep me from getting too talkative, and thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion. Lord, Thou knowest better than I know myself that I am growing older. Release me from craving to straighten out everybody's affairs. Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally it is possible that I may be mistaken. Make me thoughtful, but not moody; helpful but not bossy. Thou knowest, Lord, that what I want is a few friends at the end."

The last time T. S. Eliot visited America he saw a football game played by two crack college teams from the Big Ten. Later Eliot was heard to comment, "This game has now become so intricate, and the plays so complicated, that I imagine the players find their studies a relaxation."

Two confused Polish Communists were trying to make some kind of sense out of the current chaotic international situation. "Thank the Lord," concluded one, "that between Poland and China there's still one nice buffer state—Russia!"

Britain Searches For A Balance

Rising unemployment and signs of a sagging economy have compelled the Bank of England to reduce its discount rate from 4½ to 4 per cent. The cut is the sixth since the summer of 1961 when the government increased the rate to 7 per cent in an austerity program designed to check excessive consumer spending.

Now the situation is reversed, last week's cut in the bank rate being one of a number of recent steps taken to stimulate the economy. Earlier, the government cut the sales tax on automobiles and home appliances and, similar to action taken in this country last fall, offered a tax inducement to business to spur capital spending.

The problem, in Britain as it is in the United States and other free countries, is to keep interest rates low enough to make funds available for domestic purposes and yet discourage the flow of short-term funds out of the country in search of higher yields.

The Bank of England's 4 per cent rate, which compares with the current 3 per cent in this country, is not expected to cause an exodus of foreign funds. Nor is it likely to attract funds from the United States. For this Washington must be thankful.

These Days

Presidential Power

As we move into 1963 a White House spokesman—or "highest authority"—indicates that President John F. Kennedy has reflected profitably on the substance of two years' experience in dealing with Khrushchev. But the President, in facing a new Congress, has yet to prove that he is as quick to recognize domestic realities as he is to move with the necessities imposed by the Cold War.

The reason for the split in Kennedy's sense of realism is rooted in an odd paradox deriving from his basic commitments. When he moves outwardly from his deepest convictions, as he has been doing recently in his conduct of foreign affairs, he finds his way to an intelligent opportunism. But when he tries to be pragmatic on the basis of something that he does not feel strongly about, his awareness falters. Hence we witness a man who is least successful as an opportunist where he tries his hardest to be opportunistic.

Since I do not know J.F.K. personally, I offer this analysis somewhat tentatively. However, I once interviewed a number of people who were close to the Kennedys for a series I was writing on Presidential candidates, and my impressions as of 1960 have not been altered by events. My feeling then was that John F. Kennedy was a young man fervently committed to steering his country to a safe haven through the perils of the early atomic age. He would do what it takes at the waters' edge to confound the plans of foreign dictators. This commitment, hard and true, led him eventually to take the right stand in the Cuban situation in spite of misleading advice from the "softs."

When it comes to domestic questions, however, I have never had any feeling that the President has hard and fast convictions. He lacks the instincts and the attitudes of the zealous and frequently self-righteous reformers of the Nineteen Thirties, who wanted to lift Jane Addams's humanitarian Hull House right out of its Chicago slum and plant it down in Washington as a new wing to the White House. Kennedy was never really close to what Eleanor Roosevelt represented in the Democratic Party, which was one reason for Mrs. Roosevelt's original coolness toward his candidacy.

But if Kennedy came along too late in the day to reflect the emotional attitudes of the Harry Hopkins generation, he derives from a tradition of municipal politics which has always known how to give a quid (a Christmas turkey, a New Year's Day scuttle of coal) for a quo (a vote on election day).

Like any successful politician he knows he must have a power base if he is to maintain himself in office long enough to carry out some of the things he really feels strongly about. And in seeking to preserve his power base, he begins with the elements that made the Democratic Party of Franklin D. Roosevelt so successful.

The traditional Democratic power blocs include the big labor unions, the local followings of the old-time city bosses, the less successful—or the less fortunate—farmers, and the eggheads who believe that reform should be imposed from bureaus located on the Potomac. Directing all these horses in tandem, Franklin Roosevelt won four elections. In winning, he kept the Democratic South in his pocket despite his attitude toward old-line Southerners such as the late Senator Walter George of Georgia.

As a party leader who must look to the nature of his power base, Kennedy is still going through the motions of holding the Roosevelt coalition together. He pleases the centralizing humanitarians by his insistence on Medicare and Federal Aid to Education. He tries not to alienate Walter Reuther of the C.I.O. He makes the familiar gestures to ethnic groups, and he seeks to underwrite the agricultural price structure at a high level.

The question is, however, whether he has ever made the intellectual effort to comprehend the basic realignments of power groups in the affluent Nineteen Fifties and Sixties. Since Roosevelt's heyday a whole new middle class has come into being. That middle class can pay for its own medical insurance. It can finance its own local schools. Its paychecks have been coming in regularly, and it is sick of legislation that takes bigger and bigger cuts from weekly income. It does not mind a Social Security floor for old people, but it has no hankering to pay the inflationary bill that will be presented if that floor continues to gyrate upward toward the ceiling.

So it is a question whether the country, on balance, wants the President's proposed domestic legislation. Will a Kennedy who is keen about refurbishing the sources of his power take the hint before 1964?

Public Gets Wrong Impression Of Rules Fight

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — Yes, there is a Congress. It is composed of 435 Representatives and 100 Senators —all of them elected directly by the people of the United States.

For two months now, day after day, newspapers and television and radio have told of the activities of the President — conferences and speeches, statements on public policy and plans for legislative proposals. The country may have indeed gotten the impression that the President runs the government. Actually, the President proposes, but Congress disposes.

For, under a written constitution, the President cannot interfere with the operations of Congress as specified in that document, and Congress cannot interfere with the exercise of any constitutional power delegated to the President.

Yet, as the 88th Congress goes into its first session this week, the impression the country has been given by some news dispatches and radio and TV discussions is that the President is trying to tell Congress what rules it shall adopt for the size of its committees or for the length of its debates. Again and again, the Supreme Court has decided that these rules are solely within the power of Congress itself to prescribe.

The President constitutionally can have nothing to say about the fight over the Senate or House rules. He has no voice in such matters. Strictly speaking, it is unconstitutional for him to endeavor improperly to influence the votes of the members of either house on these questions, even though they may indirectly legislative proposals. The Constitution gives the President no right to lobby or to use his presidential office to secure the passage of legislation at any time, whether by the promise of or threats to withhold favors to members of Congress. He can recommend legislation to Congress, but he cannot coerce members of either house to vote as he demands.

This is important to the integrity of Democratic government today and in the future. Specifically, the House and Senate may each decide for itself how much a minority in its membership shall have. This is a function that cannot be legally tampered with from the outside.

The authority of the House Rules Committee to conduct its business is entirely independent of the merits of legislative proposals themselves. A bill can be pigeonholed in any committee by a majority of the committee. But the House can, by petition of a majority of the members, get a bill to the floor for action.

As for the anti-filibuster rule in the Senate, in some instances it makes little difference, theoretically, whether a two-thirds or a three-fifths majority is necessary to end debate. Actually, the measures that are debated at length often have better than a one-third minority against ending debate. Today, for example, the so-called conservative "coalition" draws votes from both parties. Nobody knows whether giving the power to three-fifths, or 60 members, of the Senate to end debate will make it any easier to get such a vote in specific instances than under the present rule requiring two-thirds, or 67 members, of the Senate. When issues become acute and only a narrow majority in the Senate itself is in favor of a measure, it isn't hard to pick up a few votes to keep a filibuster going. The right to debate amendments at length also gives the minority an opportunity to prolong the discussion by introducing new amendments, all of which can be debated thoroughly.

A controversy over the Senate rules has come up in recent years at the beginning of almost every session. No concrete legislative measures are usually being considered, though in the background generally is the "civil rights" issue. While the assumption is that only the Southerners are interested in this question, there are growing indications that Northern Senators find themselves concerned about limitation on debate and "gag rule."

Meanwhile, a lot of time will be used up on the rules problem in the first few days of the session. Oddly enough, if the rules are modified so as to diminish the rights of the minority in either the House or the Senate, this will be erroneously hailed in the headlines as a victory for the President. For he is not permitted under the Constitution to have a part in the making of the rules of either house. The reason for playing it up as a presidential victory or defeat is the assumption that back stage the Administration — in disregard of the Constitution — is using whatever influence it can command to cause members of Congress to vote as the White House dictates, rather than as they might really want to from the standpoint of their constituents.

Senator Humphrey Grants Double Interview On Latin America Trip

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — One of the grandsons to whom I sometimes write letters, has now grown to the age where he can understand government firsthand, rather than by mail; so, during the New Year's holiday, I took him up to the Senate of the United States.

"We're going to call on President Kennedy's assistant leader in the Senate," I explained.

"Is that Senator Byrd?" asked my grandson, who goes to school in Virginia, where Sen. Harry Byrd is supposed to run everything.

"No, it's Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota," I explained. "He once ran for president against Kennedy but is now helping Kennedy. He has just come back from Latin America, and I want to see whether he earned the taxpayers' money on his trip."

Senator Humphrey was more than equal to the double interview. He produced some photos of himself holding a live boa constrictor as one evidence that he hadn't wasted the taxpayers' money in Latin America.

"In Panama, the U. S. Army is conducting a school for guerrilla warfare in the jungles, and one thing they have to get used to is wild animals," Sen. Humphrey explained.

We couldn't tell from the photo whether the Senator or the snake looked the more unhappy.

"I suppose you were getting in training for guerrilla warfare with Barry Goldwater," I observed.

The Senator brushed this aside and went on to other snakes in South America, especially military leaders who have been undermining the Alliance for Progress.

Charley Bartlett Knew

"President Prado of Peru," he said, "was the man who, one day after Pearl Harbor, sent word to the United States asking what we wanted Peru to do.

"Yet the Peruvian army and navy, which we had trained and supported, kicked him out of office, using our Sherman tanks to do it. And during the Cuban crisis last fall, when we asked the Peruvian military to support us with the destroyers we had given them, they refused.

"Nevertheless," pointed out Senator Humphrey, "we recognized this military regime and have supported them with aid."

"Why?" asked my puzzled grandson.

"Because of the pressure of American business interests in Peru," was the reply. "Secretary of State Rusk was opposed, Assistant Secretary Ed Martin was opposed, and Ambassador Jim Loeb lost his job because he was opposed. But American business interests, except for L. E. Stalker, president of Sears, Roebuck, all pressured the White House for us to do business with the military. They got their way.

"The tip-off came, even before the State Department knew about it, from Charley Bartlett," continued the Senator, referring to JFK's press pal of Saturday Evening Post fame. "Bartlett told Ambassador Berkemeyer, 'Don't worry, your government's going to be recognized in a few days.' And it was."

Slow Alliance For Progress

The question of the Latin-American military had come up when I asked Humphrey about the slowness of the Alliance for Progress. He pointed out that the military neither understood nor wanted social reforms.

"In addition," he said, "the Alliance is being run by bankers and economists up here in Washington when it should be run by people with a heart.

"We're in a race against time as well as against Communism. The Communists don't have to worry about red tape. They pile the aid into Cuba for Castro, while we wait for a Grade 15 bureaucrat to send a task force to look over the housing program in Venezuela, and then wait for a Grade 17 bureaucrat to OK it, after which we wait some more while it goes on to the top.

"It's been one year since Kennedy was down in Venezuela promising them housing help. Up until a few weeks ago, nothing had happened," continued the Senator.

"They told me not to go into the slums of Caracas — it was dangerous. I went anyway. I played baseball with the kids and talked to them about the United States.

"I saw women working at night moulding cinder blocks to build new houses, working alongside their husbands. People are working. President Betancourt of Venezuela is doing a great job. So is President Lopez Mateos in Mexico. But they need guidance, not red tape, from the United States."

The Senator from Minnesota talked eloquently, with conviction and at some length.

"Neat guy," remarked my grandson after we departed. "Do you think he wasted the taxpayers' money?"

I allowed that he hadn't. There was a pause, then another question: "Did he really run for President against Kennedy?"

I explained that Humphrey had run as a Democrat in the Democratic primaries against Kennedy, and that under our system men could oppose each other and then work together for better government. Two factors, I explained, that helped to defeat Humphrey were lack of money and the reaction of some people to his rapid-fire method of talking.

"Maybe," concluded my grandson, "he just had a lot of important things to say."

When a person is thwarted or frustrated, for example, he is likely to reach for reward or party foods such as chocolates, ice cream, nuts, cake, or hot dogs. Fetish foods are those many of us think we cannot do without; the athlete and his red meat is an example. Bread, the staff of life, is another and many food faddists have a long list of nutriments that fall into this category.

The maturity foods (beer, coffee, and tea) are items used by adults but denied to children. Milk and milk products are regarded as security foods because they help bind the early parent-child relationship. Most of us have consumed large amounts of a particular food on certain occasions when we feel a special need for emotional comfort.

We also have a private list of foods that remind us of happy circumstances and another list that has unpleasant associations. These include foods to which we develop aversions through religious or cultural upbringing or because they once caused a digestive upset.

INSECURE COUPLE

Mrs. D. writes: My husband and I both lack confidence. This hinders us in our social life and his work. Should we see a psychiatrist?

REPLY

Psychiatric care may uncover the cause of your insecurity and teach you to live within your limitations. But I doubt if it would make you more capable or add to your abilities.

NOSEBLEED ON RISING

S. M. writes: Lately, I am suffering from nosebleed on getting up in the morning. I'm 61. Can you tell me the cause?

REPLY

No, but your physician can. He will examine your nose to see whether a scratch, an ulcer, or a tumor is present, take the blood pressure recording, check your heart, and order blood tests to determine whether a bleeding tendency exists.

JAUNDICE IN NEWBORNS

W.D. writes: Why do some infants have jaundice at birth?

REPLY

Because of an incompatibility of blood between mother and child. There is no need for concern when the skin turns slightly yellow a few days after birth. This occurs so often in new babies it might be considered normal.

PROTECTION FROM FLU

L. P. writes: I had influenza last year. Does this mean I'm now immune to the disease?

REPLY

No, you may be immune to the particular flu bug you had last year but there are other types, each of which has different strains. If you were hit by virus B, for example, this year you could contract one of the strains of virus A, such as Asian flu. Why not be protected with flu shots?

TOMORROW: Oral reactions to allergens.

To the limit of space questions pertaining to the prevention of diseases will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

Copy of a prayer discovered by a correspondent in a room at a Long Island inn: "Keep me from getting too talkative, and thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion. Lord, Thou knowest better than I know myself that I am growing older. Release me from craving to straighten out everybody's affairs. Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally it is possible that I may be mistaken. Make me thoughtful, but not moody; helpful but not bossy. Thou knowest, Lord, that what I want is a few friends at the end."

The last time T. S. Eliot visited America he saw a football game played by two crack college teams from the Big Ten. Later Eliot was heard to comment, "This game has now become so intricate, and the plays so complicated, that I imagine the players find their studies a relaxation."

Two confused Polish Communists were trying to make some kind of sense out of the current chaotic international situation. "Thank the Lord," concluded one, "that between Poland and China there's still one nice buffer state—Russia!"

Tea Punch With A Punch

Some cold winter night when your husband has his buddies in for the evening, win him a Lucky Guy Medal by providing refreshments tailored to a man's taste. A brimming bowl of steaming Rum Tea Punch and hefty hero sandwiches will suit them to a "T"! Make everything ahead, ready for him to serve so you can take off and leave them to their own devices.

The cheering lift of a good hot cup of tea has long been a matter of history. Just so, today. This versatile beverage also takes avidly to dressing up for a party in combination with other good things. For a man's get-together, dress it in man fashion with this heart-warming punch, to a man's taste. As for the quantity, figure the number of servings you think are right, and then double it. Any man who can boil water can make it ready in a jiffy. Here's how:

Hot Rum Tea Punch

- 2 quarts freshly drawn cold water
- 10 whole cloves
- 4 cinnamon sticks
- ¼ cup tea leaves, 15 teabags, or 5 tablespoons instant tea
- 1 6-ounce can frozen lemonade or limeade concentrate
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 pint rum (or rum flavoring to taste)

Bring water and spices to a full rolling boil. Remove from heat. Add tea leaves or teabags; cover and let steep three to five minutes. Strain into a container that can be used for reheating. If your choice is the convenience of instant tea, add it now with the fruit concentrate and sugar. Stir to blend well. Cover tightly and store in the refrigerator. Add rum at serving time. Heat, BUT DO NOT BOIL.

As for the sandwiches, split loaves of French bread lengthwise and spread with butter and mustard. Layer thick slices of salami, cheese and tomato on bottom halves, put on top and tightly wrap each loaf in saran wrap or foil. Store in the most conspicuous place you can find in the refrigerator so he won't have to search, and do make extras to fill the inevitable calls for seconds.

The Secret Of Making Perfect Croutons

Croutons are a delightful accompaniment for soups and salads and a vital ingredient in Caesar Salad. They can be made ahead and stored in a covered container in the refrigerator. Trim crusts from stale bread, brush both sides with Spanish olive oil and cut the bread into small cubes. Toast in a skillet over moderate heat or bake, spread out on a baking sheet, at 350° for 10 to 15 minutes until golden. If done in a skillet, turn once. For Caesar Salad, add a sliced clove of garlic to ¼ cup of Spanish olive oil, heat until garlic browns then remove and discard garlic, add the bread cubes and saute over moderate heat until evenly golden.

A "pick up" supper of fried chicken, bread and butter sandwiches, crisp relishes, fresh fruit, cookies and milk is fun for the kids and easy for you. To delight the children, cut the sandwiches into animal shapes with cookie cutters. And for flavor enjoyment, vary the seasoning in the butter filling. To ¼ cup softened butter or margarine, add one of the following and blend thoroughly: 2 teaspoons lemon juice; 2 tablespoon Parmesan cheese; 4 teaspoons prepared mustard or 3 tablespoons honey. This amount makes enough butter spread for 4 whole sandwiches.

Buffet Meal In Salad Bowl

A basic Bean Salad recipe can be a cook's best friend. Made with the unusual large white Great Northern Dried Beans, almost exclusively Idaho-grown, such a salad will play many roles. These may range from a buffet-meal-in-a-salad-bowl to substantial partner and extender for main course meats. Economical to make, it is also obliging, combining with what's on hand in the refrigerator, as well as best buys in the markets—cold meats, canned fish and sea food, vegetables.

Great Northern Bean Salad

- 5 cups cooked and drained Idaho Great Northern beans
- cut clove garlic, to rub salad bowl
- ½ cup or more tomato-free French or Italian dressing
- 1 cup coarsely cut celery
- ½ cup small cuts dill pickle
- ¼ cup minced sweet Spanish or red onion
- 2 cups mayonnaise, combined with
- 1 cup (½-pint) thick dairy-soured cream
- garnishes and additions as desired

To have 5 cups cooked beans, place 2 cups washed Idaho Great Northern beans in 5 cups water. Bring to boiling point; boil 2 minutes only. Add ¼ level teaspoon soda. Let stand 1 hour. Or, if more convenient, soak overnight. To cook, add 2 teaspoons salt and 2 tablespoons butter or salad oil to beans and soaking water. Bring to boiling point rapidly. Reduce heat to simmer. Cover and cook until beans are tender but firm, about 1 and ½ hours, depending on altitude, hardness of water. Drain off liquid. This will make a nice bowl of soup for lunch. Place hot beans in salad bowl rubbed with garlic. Lightly mix in oil dressing, just enough to coat beans. Cover. Chill several hours or overnight.

An hour or so before ready to serve, fold lightly into the beans the celery, pickle, onion, and enough of the combined mayonnaise and cream to moisten well.

Add seasonings as desired—salt, coarse-grind black pepper (the garlic black pepper is wonderful), a bit of dill pickle juice or a pinch of dill weed, snipped parsley. Chill again. Just before serving, tuck in frills of salad greens to fit the bowl. Garnish as you like. Use remaining mayonnaise to serve with the salad.

Additions to make a Meal-in-a-Salad-Bowl:

1. Chilled shrimp, hard-cooked egg slices, asparagus tips—canned, frozen or fresh.
2. Cooked ham, chicken or turkey, sharp Cheddar or Swiss cheese cut in slivers; tomato wedges or bundles of uncut green beans, canned or fresh cooked.
3. Lobster or crab meat, thin-sliced cucumbers, ripe olives, mixed salad greens.
4. Tuna fish chunks, anchovy strips, sliced tomatoes, lemon wedges, drained capers.
5. Salami slices spread with softened cream cheese and rolled; artichoke hearts.

Colorful trims and toppings:

Tiny radishes—whole or thin-sliced, green peppers in rings or coarse-cut, stuffed ripe or green olives, onion rings, avocado wedges or dice, lemon slices or wedges paprika-dusted, pickle slices or fans, chive snippets, little green onions—whole or sliced thin tops and all, tomato aspic cubes, celery stuffed with soft cheese or deviled ham and cream cheese, tiny bread squares dipped in melted butter and Parmesan cheese and oven-toasted, watercress as sprigs or snipped, pickled beets.

Ways To Serve Basic Bean Salad

1. Make Tomato Aspic in ring mold, turn out on cold plate. Fill with Bean Salad. Garnish with cold meats, deviled eggs, crisp salad greens, pickle slices, olives.
2. Add cubes of salami or luncheon meat and Swiss or Cheddar cheese to salad. Use sweet or sour cucumber pickles instead of the dill pickles.
3. Combine with some crisp shredded cabbage, white or red. Fun to serve in a hollowed-out cabbage. Good with cold sliced baked ham.

Tasty Test

Next time you make hamburgers, try an interesting flavor test. Make up half the batch of burgers the usual way; to the other half add 1 teaspoon Ac'cent pure monosodium glutamate per pound of meat and cook as usual. At serving time, taste a plain hamburger first. Then taste a burger with Ac'cent — and discover a wonderful new world of flavor. Ac'cent brings out all the natural taste of foods and makes the beef taste "beefier."

Grape-Berry Sparkle

(48 punch-cup servings)

- 1½ cups fresh lemon juice
- 3 1 pint 8-ounce bottles grape juice
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 12-ounce package frozen boysenberries, partially thawed
- 3 28-ounce bottles chilled ginger ale
- California lemon slices

Combine lemon juice, grape juice, sugar and berries, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Just before serving, pour over ice in punch bowl. Add ginger ale. Garnish with lemon slices.

Buffet Meal In Salad Bowl

A basic Bean Salad recipe can be a cook's best friend. Made with the unusual large white Great Northern Dried Beans, almost exclusively Idaho-grown, such a salad will play many roles. These may range from a buffet-meal-in-a-salad-bowl to substantial partner and extender for main course meats. Economical to make, it is also obliging, combining with what's on hand in the refrigerator, as well as best buys in the markets—cold meats, canned fish and sea food, vegetables.

Great Northern Bean Salad

- 5 cups cooked and drained Idaho Great Northern beans
- cut clove garlic, to rub salad bowl
- ½ cup or more tomato-free French or Italian dressing
- 1 cup coarsely cut celery
- ½ cup small cuts dill pickle
- ¼ cup minced sweet Spanish or red onion
- 2 cups mayonnaise, combined with
- 1 cup (½-pint) thick dairy-soured cream
- garnishes and additions as desired

To have 5 cups cooked beans, place 2 cups washed Idaho Great Northern beans in 5 cups water. Bring to boiling point; boil 2 minutes only. Add ¼ level teaspoon soda. Let stand 1 hour. Or, if more convenient, soak overnight. To cook, add 2 teaspoons salt and 2 tablespoons butter or salad oil to beans and soaking water. Bring to boiling point rapidly. Reduce heat to simmer. Cover and cook until beans are tender but firm, about 1 and ½ hours, depending on altitude, hardness of water. Drain off liquid. This will make a nice bowl of soup for lunch. Place hot beans in salad bowl rubbed with garlic. Lightly mix in oil dressing, just enough to coat beans. Cover. Chill several hours or overnight.

An hour or so before ready to serve, fold lightly into the beans the celery, pickle, onion, and enough of the combined mayonnaise and cream to moisten well.

Add seasonings as desired—salt, coarse-grind black pepper (the garlic black pepper is wonderful), a bit of dill pickle juice or a pinch of dill weed, snipped parsley. Chill again. Just before serving, tuck in frills of salad greens to fit the bowl. Garnish as you like. Use remaining mayonnaise to serve with the salad.

Additions to make a Meal-in-a-Salad-Bowl:

1. Chilled shrimp, hard-cooked egg slices, asparagus tips—canned, frozen or fresh.
2. Cooked ham, chicken or turkey, sharp Cheddar or Swiss cheese cut in slivers; tomato wedges or bundles of uncut green beans, canned or fresh cooked.
3. Lobster or crab meat, thin-sliced cucumbers, ripe olives, mixed salad greens.
4. Tuna fish chunks, anchovy strips, sliced tomatoes, lemon wedges, drained capers.
5. Salami slices spread with softened cream cheese and rolled; artichoke hearts.

Colorful trims and toppings:

Tiny radishes—whole or thin-sliced, green peppers in rings or coarse-cut, stuffed ripe or green olives, onion rings, avocado wedges or dice, lemon slices or wedges paprika-dusted, pickle slices or fans, chive snippets, little green onions—whole or sliced thin tops and all, tomato aspic cubes, celery stuffed with soft cheese or deviled ham and cream cheese, tiny bread squares dipped in melted butter and Parmesan cheese and oven-toasted, watercress as sprigs or snipped, pickled beets.

Ways To Serve Basic Bean Salad

1. Make Tomato Aspic in ring mold, turn out on cold plate. Fill with Bean Salad. Garnish with cold meats, deviled eggs, crisp salad greens, pickle slices, olives.
2. Add cubes of salami or luncheon meat and Swiss or Cheddar cheese to salad. Use sweet or sour cucumber pickles instead of the dill pickles.
3. Combine with some crisp shredded cabbage, white or red. Fun to serve in a hollowed-out cabbage. Good with cold sliced baked ham.

Tasty Test

Next time you make hamburgers, try an interesting flavor test. Make up half the batch of burgers the usual way; to the other half add 1 teaspoon Ac'cent pure monosodium glutamate per pound of meat and cook as usual. At serving time, taste a plain hamburger first. Then taste a burger with Ac'cent — and discover a wonderful new world of flavor. Ac'cent brings out all the natural taste of foods and makes the beef taste "beefier."

Grape-Berry Sparkle

(48 punch-cup servings)

- 1½ cups fresh lemon juice
- 3 1 pint 8-ounce bottles grape juice
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 12-ounce package frozen boysenberries, partially thawed
- 3 28-ounce bottles chilled ginger ale
- California lemon slices

Combine lemon juice, grape juice, sugar and berries, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Just before serving, pour over ice in punch bowl. Add ginger ale. Garnish with lemon slices.

Organdy curtains should be starched in medium starch and hung on the line for only a few minutes. While still wet, roll in large bath towel and leave for several hours. Iron while damp. Leave lower half of curtain in the towel while ironing the top half, to prevent its drying out.

Tea Punch With A Punch

Some cold winter night when your husband has his buddies in for the evening, win him a Lucky Guy Medal by providing refreshments tailored to a man's taste. A brimming bowl of steaming Rum Tea Punch and hefty hero sandwiches will suit them to a "T"! Make everything ahead, ready for him to serve so you can take off and leave them to their own devices.

The cheering lift of a good hot cup of tea has long been a matter of history. Just so, today. This versatile beverage also takes avidly to dressing up for a party in combination with other good things. For a man's get-together, dress it in man fashion with this heart-warming punch, to a man's taste. As for the quantity, figure the number of servings you think are right, and then double it. Any man who can boil water can make it ready in a jiffy. Here's how:

Hot Rum Tea Punch

- 2 quarts freshly drawn cold water
- 10 whole cloves
- 4 cinnamon sticks
- ¼ cup tea leaves, 15 teabags, or 5 tablespoons instant tea
- 1 6-ounce can frozen lemonade or limeade concentrate
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 pint rum (or rum flavoring to taste)

Bring water and spices to a full rolling boil. Remove from heat. Add tea leaves or teabags; cover and let steep three to five minutes. Strain into a container that can be used for reheating. If your choice is the convenience of instant tea, add it now with the fruit concentrate and sugar. Stir to blend well. Cover tightly and store in the refrigerator. Add rum at serving time. Heat, BUT DO NOT BOIL.

As for the sandwiches, split loaves of French bread lengthwise and spread with butter and mustard. Layer thick slices of salami, cheese and tomato on bottom halves, put on top and tightly wrap each loaf in saran wrap or foil. Store in the most conspicuous place you can find in the refrigerator so he won't have to search, and do make extras to fill the inevitable calls for seconds.

The Secret Of Making Perfect Croutons

Croutons are a delightful accompaniment for soups and salads and a vital ingredient in Caesar Salad. They can be made ahead and stored in a covered container in the refrigerator. Trim crusts from stale bread, brush both sides with Spanish olive oil and cut the bread into small cubes. Toast in a skillet over moderate heat or bake, spread out on a baking sheet, at 350° for 10 to 15 minutes until golden. If done in a skillet, turn once. For Caesar Salad, add a sliced clove of garlic to ¼ cup of Spanish olive oil, heat until garlic browns then remove and discard garlic, add the bread cubes and saute over moderate heat until evenly golden.

A "pick up" supper of fried chicken, bread and butter sandwiches, crisp relishes, fresh fruit, cookies and milk is fun for the kids and easy for you. To delight the children, cut the sandwiches into animal shapes with cookie cutters. And for flavor enjoyment, vary the seasoning in the butter filling. To ¼ cup softened butter or margarine, add one of the following and blend thoroughly: 2 teaspoons lemon juice; 2 tablespoon Parmesan cheese; 4 teaspoons prepared mustard or 3 tablespoons honey. This amount makes enough butter spread for 4 whole sandwiches.

Meet The Bean Family Of Idaho, U. S. A.

Many varieties of Beans are successfully grown in Idaho, but the three principal dry bean types are the Great Northern, the Red, and the Pinto varieties. The State's ideal growth conditions — "Sun, Soil, and Water," plus modern scientific research and efficient production methods, have given Idaho's Famous Beans outstanding appearance, cooking qualities, and unusually fine flavor. Do get acquainted with Great Northern Beans: these large white beans have a delicate but distinctive flavor, to be accented lightly with melting butter, a sprinkling of herbs, a blending with various types of cheese, the addition of a bit of sweetness — honey, brown sugar, molasses. They are wonderful in any recipe calling for white beans. Ham, lamb, mutton, and chicken are their meats. These are the Beans for soups, salads, casserole dishes galore, and for the Nation's backbone recipe — Home-Baked Beans!

RED BEANS: these colorful beans have a robust flavor all their own, best played up by a cautious alliance with Mexican peppers and their condiment relatives — chili powder, oregano, cumin; generous additions of garlic and onions; dry red wines; lard instead of butter; sturdy accents given by bacon, salt pork, a meaty ham bone. They are excellent as appetizer dips, salads, croquettes, potted beans with a Mexican or a Spanish flair, a fabulous soup in the Black Bean Soup tradition, elegance on a budget!

PINTO BEANS: by way of color, these beans, uncooked, are Fashion's "beige" dappled with brown, the mottling lost in cooking but not to their detriment. Though their flavor is different from their cousins — the Red Beans, their food friends are much the same, and many recipes may be used for both Bean varieties. Beef and Pinto Beans belong to each other — "Chili Beans," "Beans with Chili con Carne," "Pinto Bean Pot with Barbecued Beef," and a host of others, along with sturdy seasonings. No need to choose from these three top favorites of Idaho's Bean crop. Each is enough different from the other that you could serve Idaho Beans every other night and not find them monotonous at all! . . . Beans can make the meal. Use them often!

Cooking The Beans

Water: For Idaho's large white GREAT NORTHERN dry Beans use 2½ cups water, for RED and PINTO Beans, use 3 cups water for 1 cup beans for soaking and cooking unless a cup or more of liquid is to be added as part of the ingredients. Beans should be soaked to take up part of the water lost in drying. Always use the soaking water for cooking beans. A quick and effective way to soak beans is to add them to the measured amount of water, bring water to boiling point, and boil 2 minutes. Remove from heat. Cover. Soak 1 hour and they are ready to cook. Even when soaking overnight, this "two minute boil" softens the skins and prevents souring.

Salt: for average taste 1 teaspoon of salt in the cooking water for each cup of beans is about right. Hold off if there is a salty meat addition—ham or salt pork.

Hard Water: slows down the cooking. It helps to add baking soda to the soaking water. With most tap water, add ⅛ teaspoon soda to the water allowed for 1 cup dry beans. No more. Too much soda is harmful to flavor and nutritive value.

Foam: to keep down the foam when cooking beans, add 1 tablespoon of butter, drippings (consider flavor), or vegetable salad oil, for each cup of beans. Need not skim.

Keep shape: cook beans gently. "Simmer" is the word. Stir seldom and easy!

Tomatoes: wait to add until beans are almost tender so softening won't be delayed.

Servings: one cup of dry beans will give 2½ cups cooked beans and in recipes will provide 8 to 9 servings of about ¾ cup each.

Good Eating: the bean family is rich in energy-giving nutrients, B-vitamins, iron and calcium, protein for body-building and upkeep. By adding some meat, cheese or other protein from animal source, you get the most good from the bean protein. Easy to do, for they make such good partners with many foods.

Veal Cazuela

6 thick veal chops
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon paprika
3 or 4 tablespoons Spanish olive oil
2 onions, chopped
1 garlic clove minced
¼ cup minced parsley
1 cup dry white wine, or chicken broth
1 teaspoon constrach
2 tablespoons sour cream or heavy sweet cream

Dust chops with ½ teaspoon salt and the paprika; brown over moderate heat in the olive oil. When browned on each side, transfer chops to a casserole. Add onions, garlic and parsley to oil, cook until onions are soft and lightly colored; spoon these over the veal chops in the casserole. Add the wine or chicken broth, cover the casserole, bake 1 to 1-½ hours at 350 degrees. Remove from oven, thicken sauce with cornstarch, just before serving add sour or heavy sweet cream. Serves 6.

Salt: for average taste 1 teaspoon of salt in the cooking water for each cup of beans is about right. Hold off if there is a salty meat addition—ham or salt pork.

Hard Water: slows down the cooking. It helps to add baking soda to the soaking water. With most tap water, add ⅛ teaspoon soda to the water allowed for 1 cup dry beans. No more. Too much soda is harmful to flavor and nutritive value.

Foam: to keep down the foam when cooking beans, add 1 tablespoon of butter, drippings (consider flavor), or vegetable salad oil, for each cup of beans. Need not skim.

Keep shape: cook beans gently. "Simmer" is the word. Stir seldom and easy!

Tomatoes: wait to add until beans are almost tender so softening won't be delayed.

Servings: one cup of dry beans will give 2½ cups cooked beans and in recipes will provide 8 to 9 servings of about ¾ cup each.

Good Eating: the bean family is rich in energy-giving nutrients, B-vitamins, iron and calcium, protein for body-building and upkeep. By adding some meat, cheese or other protein from animal source, you get the most good from the bean protein. Easy to do, for they make such good partners with many foods.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD — Now we know why Janet Leigh was heading in the direction of Paramount when she had that car accident: she was on her way to sign with Hal Wallis for "Wives and Lovers" (formerly "First Wife"). Yes, This is the picture that started the contract squabble between Hal and Shirley MacLaine. Janet is replacing Shirley.

Hal still sticks to his guns that Shirley MacLaine was obliged to report to Paramount on Jan. 2 under the terms of her contract." When Shirley failed to appear as notified, Hal says he gave her an added period to report and she still failed to do so.

So, it's Janet who reports for the Wallis picture which co-stars Van Johnson, Shelley Winters and Martha Hyer, with John Rich directing.

Jill St. John tells me she goes into Cedars of Lebanon Hospital this week to have her tonsils removed. I asked her if Lance Reventlow will visit her.

She replied, "Lance is taking me to the hospital," and went on to explain how kind he was to her and she is deeply fond of him. I wouldn't be surprised if there's a reconciliation between these two. Jill has won her point in becoming a successful actress. Lance is the son of my old friend Barbara Hutton and his side love is racing cars.

The government rarely concerns itself with actors, (Peter Lawford excepted) but I get it on good authority that the Department of Federal Prisons will be watching this year's Oscar race with particular interest.

The whole bloomin' bureau will be rooting for anybody but Burt Lancaster to win for his "Birdman of Alcatraz." Burt is practically a cinch nominee for his playing of Robert Stroud. The general feeling in Washington is that if Burt grabs the Oscar for his depiction of the 75-year-old ornithologist, it will revive the campaign to release the prisoner. Already the bureau has been pelted with a petition bearing 100,000 signatures asking for Stroud's release—an Oscar could increase that number tenfold.

Ursula Andress, who had her purse with all of her jewelry, her diary, her passport and all of her money, stolen from her car, was almost hysterical when she talked to me. "The police found my purse with my passport and all my papers in a vacant lot. The thief took $25 and my diary, but my $800 in cash was not stolen. I took my valuables with me because of a fire in my home recently, and didn't want to take any chances."

"I was going to call you to ask you to appeal to the thief to return my passport," she went on, "and also my identification papers, but they were all intact in my purse." John Derek, who is married to Ursula, is doing a documentary in Mexico, and apparently all the talk that they are separating is just that—talk.

That especially designed tricycle Troy Donahue had built for Suzanne Pleshette for Christmas is being redesigned, in a manner of speaking, in the Warner Brothers machine shop.

Suzanne rounded a corner when coming off the sound stage following her day's work in "Wall of Noise," and the front wheel of the bike met with the side of a property truck. Now, the tricycle faintly resembles a pretzel.

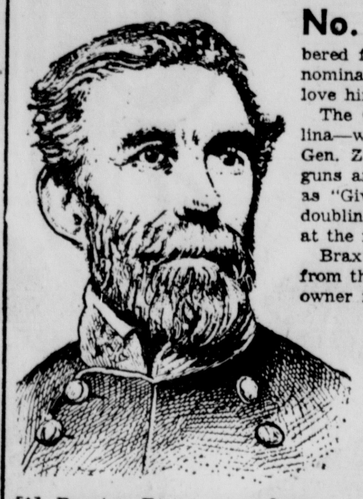
The hour-long TV feature which Henry Fonda narrated for producer David L. Wolper, "Hollywood: The Fabulous Era," has led to a new deal calling for Hank to narrate and host an entire series under the general title of "The Passing Years."

The series made in half-hour segments will reminisce about everything in general that has interested Americans for the past 50 years. To give you an idea of what to expect, the first one up is titled "1927: Boom, Booze, Ballyhoo!"—and don't think it WASN'T.

India is a charter member of the United Nations. On its tricolor flag, a saffron band symbolizes courage and sacrifice; a white one, peace and truth; the green, faith and chivalry. A spoked wheel centered on the white stripe represents India's ancient culture.

CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures



[↑] Braxton Bragg as a four-star Confederate general.

[←] Brass-buckle, such "brass" as Bragg wore. Such ornaments became rare even among generals as war lengthened and metal supplies scarcened in C.S.A.

No. 226 There was a Union General Bragg—Edward S., of Wisconsin. That Bragg was remembered for a phrase he used in seconding Grover Cleveland's nomination in the 1884 Democratic National Convention: "We love him for the enemies he has made."

The Confederate General Bragg—Braxton, of North Carolina—was the artillery officer to whom, in the Mexican War, Gen. Zachary Taylor bespoke an order, "Double shot those guns and give 'em hell." That was bowdlerized into history as "Give 'em a little more grape." (Double-shooting meant doubling the safe load of canister or grapeshot and powder at the risk of the guns blowing up on the spot.)

Braxton Bragg, a West Point graduate in 1937, had resigned from the U. S. Army in 1856 to be an engineer and plantation owner in Louisiana. He went into the Louisiana militia as a colonel, and six months later was high "brass": a major general, C.S.A., and chief of staff to Albert S. Johnston. Advanced to full general, he was sent the following June to supplant Beauregard as commander of the Army of Tennessee. That Army's initial major operation under Bragg, the abortive invasion of Kentucky in September-October 1862, was but one of a continuing series of campaigns which demonstrated his ineptitude for high command.

"Nearly all observers, on both sides, gave Bragg credit for skill in planning, but his execution of his own plans was hampered by innate vagueness of purpose, and his unpopularity with practically everyone he encountered greatly diminished his effectiveness," said an able biographer, Stanley Horn. Irritable and querrelsome, Bragg made many enemies.

Opening lead: Ten of ♣

When the dummy was spread in today's hand, South observed that he did not have a very good play for his contract. Nevertheless, he resolved to give it the old college try, and with the aid of the favorable lie of a few key cards he was able to bring about a happy ending.

We are not inclined to find fault with North and South for reaching a small slam in spades. They were the victims of considerable duplication of values in the minor suits which it was not easy to foresee. It may be observed for example that, if one of North's jacks had been located in the heart suit, declarer would have needed only the heart finesse for his contract.

West opened the ten of clubs which was taken in the closed hand with the king. South saw that he had an inevitable trump loser and that, unless West held specifically the singleton king of hearts, the only chance he had was to force the opponents to lead the heart suit. He proceeded therefore to strip out the other suits in preparation for an end play.

The ace of diamonds was cashed and the dummy entered with the king of trumps. Next came the king of diamonds followed by the ruff of a small diamond in the closed hand. South cashed the ace of spades, leaving the queen outstanding, and crossed over to the ace of clubs in order to ruff away the last diamond.

The queen of clubs was now taken to complete the stripping operation. East was down to the high trump and the jack-nine-six of hearts, and South proceeded to throw him in with the queen of spades. East exited with the six of hearts which declarer covered with the eight. West was obliged to cover with the king of hearts in order to force out the dummy's ace. On the heart return, South finessed the ten and, when it held, he was able to claim a well-earned triumph.

March Of Dimes To Hold 25th Anniversary Drive

The 25th anniversary March of Dimes campaign this month promises to be one of the most successful in years, Philmore F. Fleming, county chairman, said yesterday.

Fleming, who is also acting chairman of the Allegany County Chapter of the National Foundation, said county organization for this year's drive has been completed and various chairmen and workers will be announced later this week.

Fleming is serving as chairman of the county chapter because of the resignation of John Mathias who has moved to Washington, D. C. An election of officers will be held by the chapter at the conclusion of this year's drive.

American Legion posts throughout Allegany and Garrett counties are cooperating in the March of Dimes drive which is Legion-sponsored. Fleming, a past commander of Post 13 here and present District commander, said coin containers are being distributed by Legionnaires and all posts are planning some activity for the benefit of polio victims during the month.

"Through contributions of the American people, March of Dimes supported research developed the Salk and Sabin vaccines and polio has been eliminated as a threat to the lives and well-being of children throughout the world. Millions of dollars are needed to aid those stricken in former years.

"We are striving to bring expert medical care to every community in the nation to help the thousands of infants and children disabled by birth defects and arthritis," Fleming added.

Naknek Lake in southern Alaska is noted for rocks that float and wood that sinks. The rocks littering its shore are pumice and lighter than water. The wood is petrified and often beautifully marked.

Chaires Helps Design Gate For Highway Maintenance

A former District 6 engineer of the State Roads Commission is playing a key role in developing the nation's first electronically-controlled maintenance gate for use on limited access highways.

He is G. Bates Chaires, chief of the SRC bureau of maintenance, who served in Western Maryland for many years as district engineer.

The device has been developed jointly by the commission's bureau of maintenance and bureau of communication, the latter headed by Bruce McCallum.

On interstate highways and expressways there are usually no crossovers on the median strip, but the State Roads Commission has come up with the electronic gate for use by highway maintenance trucks and snow plows.

The first will be installed this month on the Baltimore Beltway just west of the Jones Falls Expressway interchange.

After the erection of the gate, a test vehicle will be equipped with a transmitter. The operator will press a button on his dashboard; this activates a signal from the transmitter, and the signal goes to a receiver on the gate and an electric motor is activated, lifting the gate.

The operator will be able to activate the gate from a distance of between 1,000 and 1,200 feet.

John B. Funk, chairman-director, said the cost of the experiment is negligible. It will cost $200 to equip a gate with a receiver and $50 for a transmitter in the vehicle.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The recent ABC Bing Crosby special, with Mary Martin as guest star, demonstrated one of the things wrong with television. Mary isn't on it often enough; in fact almost never, except in the "Peter Pan" repeats once a year or less often. She was delightful! And Bingo wears well enough to do more than two or three shows a season.

Someone up there must like Joey Bishop. In two successive seasons, in two different situation comedy formats, the personable comedian has failed to get really off the ground. But he'll be back next fall with a one-hour variety type of show. It's to be hoped that such a change does the trick. Few get so many chances.

It will be interesting to see what happens beginning in February when NBC throws a two-hour program of rather recent motion pictures against a lineup of four of the most popular CBS half-hour programs on Monday nights between 7:30 and 9:30. The CBS offerings are "To Tell the Truth," "I've Got a Secret," "The Lucy Show" and "The Danny Thomas Show." A large viewing audience for the films could present problems to both CBS and NBC, which has said the move is only a 32-week stopgap until the new season next fall brings in a new lineup of regular video shows for this period. Would or could NBC drop a highly rated film program for unproven entertainment? And what would CBS do if its standbys began to suffer badly in the ratings?

Once upon a few years ago Nat Hiken, creator of the highly successful Phil Silvers series about Sergeant Bilko and the currently hot NBC skein, "Car 54, Where Are You?," thought he had a CBS deal for a half-hour comedy series called "The Great Montague," starring Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Vivienne Segal. But it failed to be accepted after a pilot was made. Now, Hiken has the same idea back in production with Dennis King and Myrna Loy as the stars and hopes the verdict will be different.

Fort Ashby Fires Data Is Reported

FORT ASHBY — The Fort Ashby Volunteer Fire Company answered nine alarms during 1962.

H. T. Cheshire, president, reported the following breakdown: Six houses, one dump, an automobile, one overheated stove and two Civil Defense practice runs with an average of 17 volunteers per call.

Thirty false alarms were answered.

Chief Floyd Wagoner held 38 drills which consisted of instructions on the use of fire-fighting and life-saving equipment. In response to fire calls and training purposes, a total of 838 miles were traveled with two trucks. The ambulance was used for 58 emergency calls and traveled a total of 2,628 miles.

In July, the company purchased additional emergency oxygen equipment and a 1958 rescue ambulance to replace the 1948 model which had become obsolete. The department is in the process of acquiring a two-way radio unit which will be placed in operation in mid-summer 1963 with the base station located in Romney.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD — Now we know why Janet Leigh was heading in the direction of Paramount when she had that car accident: she was on her way to sign with Hal Wallis for "Wives and Lovers" (formerly "First Wife"). Yes, this is the picture that started the contract squabble between Hal and Shirley MacLaine. Janet is replacing Shirley.

Hal still sticks to his guns that Shirley MacLaine was obliged to report to Paramount on Jan. 2 under the terms of her contract." When Shirley failed to appear as notified, Hal says he gave her an added period to report and she still failed to do so.

So, it's Janet who reports for the Wallis picture which co-stars Van Johnson, Shelley Winters and Martha Hyer, with John Rich directing.

Jill St. John tells me she goes into Cedars of Lebanon Hospital this week to have her tonsils removed. I asked her if Lance Reventlow will visit her.

She replied, "Lance is taking me to the hospital," and went on to explain how kind he was to her and she is deeply fond of him. I wouldn't be surprised if there's a reconciliation between these two. Jill has won her point in becoming a successful actress. Lance is the son of my old friend Barbara Hutton and his side love is racing cars.

The government rarely concerns itself with actors, (Peter Lawford excepted) but I get it on good authority that the Department of Federal Prisons will be watching this year's Oscar race with particular interest.

The whole bloomin' bureau will be rooting for anybody but Burt Lancaster to win for his "Birdman of Alcatraz." Burt is practically a cinch nominee for his playing of Robert Stroud. The general feeling in Washington is that if Burt grabs the Oscar for his depiction of the 75-year-old ornithologist, it will revive the campaign to release the prisoner. Already the bureau has been pelted with a petition bearing 100,000 signatures asking for Stroud's release—an Oscar could increase that number tenfold.

Ursula Andress, who had her purse with all of her jewelry, her diary, her passport and all of her money, stolen from her car, was almost hysterical when she talked to me. "The police found my purse with my passport and all my papers in a vacant lot. The thief took $25 and my diary, but my $800 in cash was not stolen. I took my valuables with me because of a fire in my home recently, and didn't want to take any chances."

"I was going to call you to ask you to appeal to the thief to return my passport," she went on, "and also my identification papers, but they were all intact in my purse." John Derek, who is married to Ursula, is doing a documentary in Mexico, and apparently all the talk that they are separating is just that—talk.

That especially designed tricycle Troy Donahue had built for Suzanne Pleshette for Christmas is being redesigned, in a manner of speaking, in the Warner Brothers machine shop.

Suzanne rounded a corner when coming off the sound stage following her day's work in "Wall of Noise," and the front wheel of the bike met with the side of a property truck. Now, the tricycle faintly resembles a pretzel.

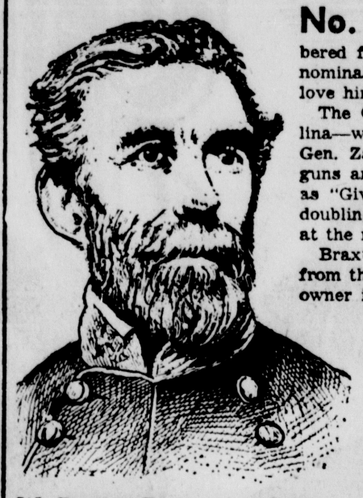
The hour-long TV feature which Henry Fonda narrated for producer David L. Wolper, "Hollywood: The Fabulous Era," has led to a new deal calling for Hank to narrate and host an entire series under the general title of "The Passing Years."

The series made in half-hour segments will reminisce about everything in general that has interested Americans for the past 50 years. To give you an idea of what to expect, the first one up is titled "1927: Boom, Booze, Ballyhoo!"—and don't think it WASN'T.

India is a charter member of the United Nations. On its tricolor flag, a saffron band symbolizes courage and sacrifice; a white one, peace and truth; the green, faith and chivalry. A spoked wheel centered on the white stripe represents India's ancient culture.

CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK

The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures



[↑] Braxton Bragg as a four-star Confederate general.

No. 226 There was a Union General Bragg—Edward S., of Wisconsin. That Bragg was remembered for a phrase he used in seconding Grover Cleveland's nomination in the 1884 Democratic National Convention: "We love him for the enemies he has made."

The Confederate General Bragg—Braxton, of North Carolina—was the artillery officer to whom, in the Mexican War, Gen. Zachary Taylor bespoke an order, "Double shot those guns and give 'em hell." That was bowdlerized into history as "Give 'em a little more grape." (Double-shooting meant doubling the safe load of canister or grapeshot and powder at the risk of the guns blowing up on the spot.)

Braxton Bragg, a West Point graduate in 1937, had resigned from the U. S. Army in 1856 to be an engineer and plantation owner in Louisiana. He went into the Louisiana militia as a colonel, and six months later was high "brass": a major general, C.S.A., and chief of staff to Albert S. Johnston. Advanced to full general, he was sent the following June to supplant Beauregard as commander of the Army of Tennessee. That Army's initial major operation under Bragg, the abortive invasion of Kentucky in September-October 1862, was but one of a continuing series of campaigns which demonstrated his ineptitude for high command.

"Nearly all observers, on both sides, gave Bragg credit for skill in planning, but his execution of his own plans was hampered by innate vagueness of purpose, and his unpopularity with practically everyone he encountered greatly diminished his effectiveness," said an able biographer, Stanley Horn. Irritable and querrelsome, Bragg made many enemies.

Yet, after all his fiascos and his replacement in command by Joseph E. Johnston, Bragg was called to Richmond as President Davis' military adviser—a mistake comparable to Lincoln's choice of Halleck as his military adviser.

—CLARK KINNAIRD

Opening lead: Ten of ♣

When the dummy was spread in today's hand, South observed that he did not have a very good play for his contract. Nevertheless, he resolved to give it the old college try, and with the aid of the favorable lie of a few key cards he was able to bring about a happy ending.

We are not inclined to find fault with North and South for reaching a small slam in spades. They were the victims of considerable duplication of values in the minor suits which it was not easy to foresee. It may be observed for example that, if one of North's jacks had been located in the heart suit, declarer would have needed only the heart finesse for his contract.

West opened the ten of clubs which was taken in the closed hand with the king. South saw that he had an inevitable trump loser and that, unless West held specifically the singleton king of hearts, the only chance he had was to force the opponents to lead the heart suit. He proceeded therefore to strip out the other suits in preparation for an end play.

The ace of diamonds was cashed and the dummy entered with the king of trumps. Next came the king of diamonds followed by the ruff of a small diamond in the closed hand. South cashed the ace of spades, leaving the queen outstanding, and crossed over to the ace of clubs in order to ruff away the last diamond.

The queen of clubs was now taken to complete the stripping operation. East was down to the high trump and the jack-nine-six of hearts, and South proceeded to throw him in with the queen of spades. East exited with the six of hearts which declarer covered with the eight. West was obliged to cover with the king of hearts in order to force out the dummy's ace. On the heart return, South finessed the ten and, when it held, he was able to claim a well-earned triumph.

March Of Dimes To Hold 25th Anniversary Drive

The 25th anniversary March of Dimes campaign this month promises to be one of the most successful in years, Philmore F. Fleming, county chairman, said yesterday.

Fleming, who is also acting chairman of the Allegany County Chapter of the National Foundation, said county organization for this year's drive has been completed and various chairmen and workers will be announced later this week.

Fleming is serving as chairman of the county chapter because of the resignation of John Mathias who has moved to Washington, D. C. An election of officers will be held by the chapter at the conclusion of this year's drive.

American Legion posts throughout Allegany and Garrett counties are cooperating in the March of Dimes drive which is Legion-sponsored. Fleming, a past commander of Post 13 here and present District commander, said coin containers are being distributed by Legionnaires and all posts are planning some activity for the benefit of polio victims during the month.

"Through contributions of the American people, March of Dimes supported research developed the Salk and Sabin vaccines and polio has been eliminated as a threat to the lives and well-being of children throughout the world. Millions of dollars are needed to aid those stricken in former years.

"We are striving to bring expert medical care to every community in the nation to help the thousands of infants and children disabled by birth defects and arthritis," Fleming added.

Naknek Lake in southern Alaska is noted for rocks that float and wood that sinks. The rocks littering its shore are pumice and lighter than water. The wood is petrified and often beautifully marked.

Chaires Helps Design Gate For Highway Maintenance

A former District 6 engineer of the State Roads Commission is playing a key role in developing the nation's first electronically-controlled maintenance gate for use on limited access highways.

He is G. Bates Chaires, chief of the SRC bureau of maintenance, who served in Western Maryland for many years as district engineer.

The device has been developed jointly by the commission's bureau of maintenance and bureau of communication, the latter headed by Bruce McCallum.

On interstate highways and expressways there are usually no crossovers on the median strip, but the State Roads Commission has come up with the electronic gate for use by highway maintenance trucks and snow plows.

The first will be installed this month on the Baltimore Beltway just west of the Jones Falls Expressway interchange.

After the erection of the gate, a test vehicle will be equipped with a transmitter. The operator will press a button on his dashboard; this activates a signal from the transmitter, and the signal goes to a receiver on the gate and an electric motor is activated, lifting the gate.

The operator will be able to activate the gate from a distance of between 1,000 and 1,200 feet.

John B. Funk, chairman-director, said the cost of the experiment is negligible. It will cost $200 to equip a gate with a receiver and $50 for a transmitter in the vehicle.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The recent ABC Bing Crosby special, with Mary Martin as guest star, demonstrated one of the things wrong with television. Mary isn't on it often enough; in fact almost never, except in the "Peter Pan" repeats once a year or less often. She was delightful! And Bingo wears well enough to do more than two or three shows a season.

Someone up there must like Joey Bishop. In two successive seasons, in two different situation comedy formats, the personable comedian has failed to get really off the ground. But he'll be back next fall with a one-hour variety type of show. It's to be hoped that such a change does the trick. Few get so many chances.

It will be interesting to see what happens beginning in February when NBC throws a two-hour program of rather recent motion pictures against a lineup of four of the most popular CBS half-hour programs on Monday nights between 7:30 and 9:30. The CBS offerings are "To Tell the Truth," "I've Got a Secret," "The Lucy Show" and "The Danny Thomas Show." A large viewing audience for the films could present problems to both CBS and NBC, which has said the move is only a 32-week stopgap until the new season next fall brings in a new lineup of regular video shows for this period. Would or could NBC drop a highly rated film program for unproven entertainment? And what would CBS do if its stand-bys began to suffer badly in the ratings?

Once upon a few years ago Nat Hiken, creator of the highly successful Phil Silvers series about Sergeant Bilko and the currently hot NBC skein, "Car 54, Where Are You?," thought he had a CBS deal for a half-hour comedy series called "The Great Montague," starring Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Vivienne Segal. But it failed to be accepted after a pilot was made. Now, Hiken has the same idea back in production with Dennis King and Myrna Loy as the stars and hopes the verdict will be different.

Fort Ashby Fires Data Is Reported

FORT ASHBY — The Fort Ashby Volunteer Fire Company answered nine alarms during 1962.

H. T. Cheshire, president, reported the following breakdown: Six houses, one dump, an automobile, one overheated stove and two Civil Defense practice runs with an average of 17 volunteers per call.

Thirty false alarms were answered.

Chief Floyd Wagoner held 38 drills which consisted of instructions on the use of fire-fighting and life-saving equipment. In response to fire calls and training purposes, a total of 838 miles were traveled with two trucks. The ambulance was used for 58 emergency calls and traveled a total of 2,628 miles.

In July, the company purchased additional emergency oxygen equipment and a 1958 rescue ambulance to replace the 1948 model which had become obsolete. The department is in the process of acquiring a two-way radio unit which will be placed in operation in mid-summer 1963 with the base station located in Romney.

Farina Dumplings— A Home-y Touch!

Light, tender, almost white, a bit raggedy in shape and of a delicate herb flavor — these are words to describe Farina Dumplings! Serve pilot crackers, sweet butter, cabbage slaw; a simple Apple Betty for dessert. All breakfast cereals offer the pleasure of adventure to the creative cook—there are so many ways they can be used to bring excitement to family meals. And breakfast cereals — remember — make nutritional contributions of protein, important B vitamins (thiamine, niacin, riboflavin) and essential minerals.

Farina Dumplings in Clam-Celery Soup

- 1 can (10½ ounce) cream of celery soup
- 1 cup water
- 1 bottle (8 ounce) clam juice
- 1 can (7½ ounce) minced clams, undrained
- ⅛ teaspoon ground thyme
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup milk
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅓ cup farine, plain or malt flavored
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Combine soup, water, clam juice, undrained clams, thyme and 2 tablespoons butter or margarine; heat. To make dumplings: Combine milk, salt and remaining 2 tablespoons butter or margarine in saucepan; bring mixture to a boil. Combine farina and flour; mix well. Add slowly to hot milk, stirring constantly during addition. Beat hot cereal slowly into eggs. Return to heat to cook eggs, about 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Cool slightly. Dip tablespoon into hot soup mixture, then spoon rounded tablespoonfuls of farina mixture in hot soup. Cover; simmer until dumplings are done, 5 to 7 minutes. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Yield: 4 servings (6 cups soup with dumplings).

A new canned juice combination for babies is prune-orange, slightly sweetened, and with added vitamin C. The pasteurized juice is finely strained so that it can be served in a baby bottle or cup.

Week's Food Economies

Fresh fruits are wonderful perker-uppers for languid winter appetites, says Virginia McLuckie, food economist in the Baltimore office of the University of Maryland Department of Markets.

As you shop for fruit you will note the best buys in apples, pears and Emperor grapes. Shopping for apples is easy when you know one variety from another, and this knowledge will increase eating enjoyment. For eating there are Red and Golden Delicious. For general purpose, Staymans, Yorks, and Romes. Keep the fruit in a cool place to maintain the refreshing crispness. The York variety is especially good for cooking and Romes make the best baking apple.

Pears are luscious eating out of hand and they also can be poached, baked, glazed, fried, sewed or pickled. The major portion of fresh pearls in the market is the D'Anjou variety. This pear variety remains green in color even when fully ripe. It is thin skinned, very juicy, smooth textured and has a rich spicy flavor. Supplies are coming from Washington, and Oregon where the crop is larger than last year's.

Emperor grapes are from California. This variety is the red spicy flavored grape with seeds that are easily removed. Fresh fruit contributes a natural sugar which satisfies the desire for sweets for children and adults.

At the fresh vegetable counter the most attractive buys are in broccoli from California and rutabagas from Canada. In selecting broccoli, look for fresh-appearing leaves and buds that are tightly closed. The stalks are edible and will cook as quickly as the flower part, if split with a sharp knife. Season with butter or a sauce made with cheese or buttered crumbs and chopped hard-cooked egg. Rutabagas are the yellow root vegetable that we use in the same way as turnips. Most of the rutabagas are heavily waxed to prevent moisture loss. Both broccoli and rutabagas are excellent Vitamin A sources. Supplies of canned and frozen vegetables offer attractive buys and supplies are more than adequate. Make cost-per-serving comparisons as you shop.

Recommendations from the meat counter are fresh pork shoulder and fryer chickens. Supplies of both are liberal and prices attractive.

Quick Starter

When company comes, start dinner with creamy curried chicken soup, made in minutes. Empty 1 (1½ ounce) envelope of cream style chicken soup mix into saucepan. Gradually add 2¼ cups of water and ½ teaspoon of curry powder. Stir until smooth. Heat and stir until soup boils. Simmer 2 minutes. Add ¾ cup of milk and heat to serving temperature. Serves 3 to 4.

Elegant Dressing For Lobster Salad

Slice 1 pound button mushrooms, place in a bowl topped with ½ cup minced dill or parsley (dill may be kept in the freezer, chopped off as needed), ½ teaspoon coarsely-ground black pepper, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, ⅔ cup Spanish olive oil and 1 cup dry vermouth. Add 1 thinly sliced shallot or small white onion. Let this stand for 24 hours, then spoon as a dressing over sliced cooked lobster; or combine lobster and shrimp, toss with the dressing, serve on lettuce.

Side Dish

Pear halves broiled with blue cheese and currant jelly make a pretty and flavorful garnish for roast lamb. Fill hollows in pear halves with cheese and top with jelly. Broil until heated through.

Expansion Plan Up To Governor And Assembly

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gov. Tawes and the General Assembly must decide what they want to do about expanding higher education if a Baltimore campus for the University of Maryland is ever to get out of the planning stage.

The decision on whether or not to expand the Baltimore campus to include undergraduate schools must come from the governor, said Charles P. McCormick, chairman of the university's Board of Regents.

An expansion committee has been studying possible sites and figures. But McCormick said Wednesday the school would be interfering with the legislature if action were taken before the legislature announced its position.

The General Assembly is considering the Curlett Report on Public Higher Education in Maryland, which calls for expanding the state teachers colleges and converting them to four-year liberal arts schools.

McCormick said the university must expand. And Dr. Wilson H. Elkins, university president, has rejected limiting admissions to the school by raising standards or expanding the College Park campus beyond a 25,000 enrollment.

About 15,000 students are now enrolled at College Park, and Dr. Elkins has urged that plans be made now for an expected flood of students in the coming years.

Secondly, he cites the construction of a major facility at Cumberland by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for marshaling and reclassifying its trains by automatic devices. Although these processes tend to reduce overall B&O employment, location of the facility in Cumberland creates needed jobs in the area.

Then he stresses the multi-million modernization of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company mill at Luke, which was made possible by construction of the Savage River Dam. This assured the industry of adequate water supply.

Another optimistic note, Mr. Kenney stresses, was the acceleration of missile and rocket programs to make Allegany Ballistics Laboratory the largest single employer in the labor market area.

Finally, he says that the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company and the Celanese Fibers Company are keeping pace with the latest production methods and are providing high, stable employment.

Mr. Kenney completes his article with the following paragraph:

"It appears that Cumberland is going through a transition in its industrial development and that prorams are underway along the Upper Potomac which greatly facilitate industrial expansion in the region. The need for increased governmental attention to the area must be recognized. The Area Redevelopment Act, which provides training, is a step in the right direction. It is also apparent that all local groups have become aware of the nature of the problem and are enthusiastically supporting the overall program."

Three pictures accompany the article. One shows the control tower of the B&O's marshaling yard. The second is a State Roads Commission marker identifying the National Road. The third shows the Kelly tire plant.

PPG Natrium Plant Will Be Expanded

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. (UPI) — Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. Wednesday announced an expansion program at its nearby Natrium plant which will cost in excess of $1 million.

Company Vice President Joseph Neubauer said the work will be done to improve the ammonia production capacity of the plant which is presently 75 tons a day.

Construction will start April 1 with completion expected sometime in October.

Children aren't responsible for all stairway maintenance problems, but their mussy handprints and hard-to-remove shoe scuffs do create a problem in many homes. One of the most popular remedies for this problem is wainscoting with washable planks. The planks, which come in plain colors and high-fidelity woodgrains, can be applied right over the old wall surfaces. A damp or sudsy cloth will remove all evidences of hard wear. The paneling's tempered hardboard base will not split or dent from abrasions.

Cleveland Fires Paul Brown As Coach And General Manager

Club Will Retain Ousted Coach As Vice-President

NFL Team Expects To Pick Successor Within Ten Days

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Paul Brown, general manager and coach of the Cleveland Browns of the National Football League, was fired Wednesday.

Cleveland President Arthur Modell, principal owner of the club, announced Brown's dismissal as coach and general manager.

"Brown will remain as a vice-president of the Browns and will assume other duties," Modell said. "He will finish out the balance of his ten-year contract with the same compensation and will continue to be a stockholder."

Modell made no announcement as to a new coach or general manager.

In Best Interests

"This has been done in what I believe to be the best interests of the Browns," Modell said. "I have several men in mind as a successor, and I hope to have some announcement within 10 days."

Brown's release as general manager and coach apparently brought to at least a temporary end one of the most brilliant and colorful coaching careers in pro history.

Brown, after coaching at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station during World War II, was the head coach of the Browns when they first started operation in the old All-America Conference in 1946. For four years Brown's Cleveland team was the powerhouse of that circuit, winning 52 games and losing only four with three ties.

Six Straight Titles

When the All-America Conference folded, Brown and the Browns moved into the National Football League and won six consecutive Eastern Division titles.

During the past season, one of the Browns' poorest under Brown, Cleveland won 7, lost 6, and tied 1.

Through 13 NFL seasons, Brown's teams won a total of seven division titles and three world championships. In the NFL under Brown, Cleveland won 115 games, lost 49, and tied 6.

Brown will finish the six years left in his 10-year contract according to Modell. Modell said Wednesday's announcement was prepared jointly with Brown. He denied there had been friction between the two. "Would I ask him to stay for six more years if there's been friction?"

Duke Tops Navy For Eleventh Victory, 85-70

Heyman, Mullins Spark Triumph

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Duke's one-two scoring punch of Art Heyman and Jeff Mullins combined for a total of 52 points Wednesday to give the Blue Devils an 85-70 victory over Navy.

Duke, now with an 11-2 record, scored 32 field goals, only one more than Navy, but cushioned its win with 21 foul shots to the Middies' eight.

Navy outshot Duke from the field in the first half, but the Blue Devils' 13-3 margin from the foul line gave them a 41-33 halftime lead.

Behind by 12 points during a span of seven minutes in the first half, Navy rallied slightly for two baskets by Ron Terwilliger and a field goal by John Mahoney to cut Duke's lead to 33-27 with 2:45 left in the half.

However, Heyman, who scored a game high of 28 points, and Mullins, who netted 24, killed the surge at the start of the second half and quickly pushed Duke to a commanding 49-35 lead.

Navy, led by Mahoney's 18 points, had four of its starting team score in double figures. It was Navy's fifth loss in nine games.

Prospects Are Dim For NBA Expansion

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The president of the National Basketball Association says he sees little prospect that the league will grant additional franchises when it meets in Los Angeles next week.

Maurice Podoloff said in New York City that a lack of sufficient talent from collegiate ranks was one of the prime factors standing in the way of league expansion.

Policy Adopted By NCAA Would Boycott AAU

4-Point Program Given Approval

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The National Collegiate Athletic Association adopted Wednesday as its official policy a four-point program which would limit college athletes to events it favors.

The NCAA has been engaged in a bitter war—now headed for arbitration—with the rival Amateur Athletic Union for control of amateur sports. Wednesday's policy, if carried out strictly, could amount to a boycott of AAU events not sanctioned by the NCAA.

Delegates at the closing session of the NCAA's 57th annual convention gave unanimous approval to the policy, expressed in a resolution presented by the Rev. Wilfred Crowley of the University of Santa Clara.

Father Crowley is secretary-treasurer of the NCAA and a leading college spokesman for the new U.S. Track and Field Federation created last year by the NCAA.

Amendment Withdrawn

His resolution came to a vote after withdrawal of an amendment that would have provided penalties to collegians for entering track and field competition not sanctioned by the federation.

It first calls for reaffirmation by the NCAA of the federation, created during the dispute with the AAU; asks member institutions to support only those meets and tournaments sanctioned by the federation, and then pledges adoption as policy of the four-point recommendation made to all member institutions last Oct. 24.

The four call for:

1. Member colleges to withdraw from membership in the AAU until the AAU indicates a cooperative attitude toward federation members.

2. Member colleges not to enter athletes or teams in AAU competition unless the event is sanctioned by the appropriate federation.

3. Staff personnel of member schools to withdraw from AAU committees in basketball, gymnastics and track and field.

4. Institutional facilities and equipment to be utilized to the maximum to further federation activity.

May Use Facilities

The fourth step provides that the AAU may use the facilities and equipment if it joins the federation movement, under the charter of which it has equal voting power with the NCAA; or if it enters into a sanctioned agreement.

Robert Ray of the State University of Iowa was elected NCAA president, succeeding Dr. Henry Hadrt of Texas Christian University.

Next year's convention was set for New York City Jan. 3-8.

Hawkins May Play With Globetrotters

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — At least four members of the now defunct Pittsburgh Rens will continue to play professional basketball.

Connie Hawkins, the most valuable player in the American Basketball League last year, will probably go with the Harlem Globetrotters, Rens' General Manager Joe Gordon said.

Gordon also said that Jim McCoy and Walt Mangham, a pair of Marquette grads, would play for Williamsport in the Eastern League and former Cincinnati All-America Bob Weisenhahn will play for Dayton in the Midwest League.

Phil Rollins and Charley Tyra, two ex-Louisville University standouts, have returned there to work in the real estate and insurance field.

Whitey Bell, from North Carolina State, has returned to sales work and Hank Whitney, Iowa St., will teach physical education in Brooklyn, N. Y., his home.

Woodling To Quit Mets, To Join Yanks As Coach

Gene Is Expected To Replace Moses On New York Club

NEW YORK (UPI) — Outfielder Gene Woodling, who played for five New York Yankee championship teams between 1949 and 1954, is expected to rejoin his old club as a coach.

Woodling, it was reported on Wednesday, will ask for his release from the New York Mets to take the job.

Indications are that Woodling will replace Wally Moses as first base and batting coach, with Moses being assigned to a job as batting instructor in the Yankees' farm system. Woodling's appointment probably will be announced after the New York newspaper strike is settled.

Woodling, who started the 1962 season with the Washington Senators, batted .274 for the Mets in 81 games. The 40-year-old outfielder had played for four clubs since being traded by the Yanks to the Baltimore Orioles in 1955.

The departure of Woodling, following Richie Ashburn's decision to quit baseball for a sportscaster's job, would leave the Mets with only four outfielders. The quartet, all right-handed batters, are Joe Christopher, Frank Thomas, Jim Hickman and rookie Dick Smith.

Shenandoah Downs Opens First Winter Meeting Tomorrow

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va. — Shenandoah Downs opens its first winter meeting tomorrow with Dorothy W. Turner's Silver Song facing her stiffest competition ever in the National Captial Purse at 5½ furlongs.

The gray daughter of Royal Note holds the Shenandoah track record of 1:04 2/5 for the 5½-furlong distance of the feature, but should be hard pressed in the field of nine.

Operated primarily as a night track since it was opened in 1959, Shenandoah Downs will switch to the conventional 1 p.m. post time for the 20-day winter session, and will run nine races daily. The track, which pioneered pool wagering here in 1960, also will offer the twin double.

Shenandoah's nine-race betting mark of a little over $580,714 is almost certain to tumble Saturday as the track offers the only racing north of Miami. Along with that mark also would go the daily double pool record of $42,000 and the single race high of $60,000.

There also is a good chance that the all-time West Virginia betting record of $880,624 will be broken. That high was set at the Shenandoah Downs doubleheader last Labor Day when the track ran two complete nine-race cards.

Wilhelm Sets Pace

Hoyt Wilhelm, of the Baltimore Orioles, and Harry Brecheen, Birds' coach, rank one and four, respectively, in lifetime earned run average among all pitchers who have worked in the lively ball era (since 1920). Hoyt leads with 2.74, followed by Whitey Ford at 2.79, former Yankee Spud Chandler at 2.84 and Brecheen, who logged a 2.92 ERA over 11 major seasons.

McKay Named Major College Coach Of Year

John Edwards Best In Small Colleges

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John McKay of the University of Southern California and John Edwards of Wittenberg College (Springfield, Ohio) Wednesday were selected as the major and small college coaches of 1962 by the American Football Coaches Association.

McKay coached Southern California to an undefeated season which earned the Trojans the national championship, and also led USC to a Rose Bowl triumph.

The announcement came during the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) convention.

McKay was a runaway winner in the balloting by 2,300 members of the coaches association. Runnerup was Johnny Vaught of Mississippi. Although the actual ballot was not disclosed, McKay's margin was reported the largest in the 28 year history of the coach of the year competition.

Milt Bruhn of Wisconsin, whose Badgers lost a thrilling 42 - 37 decision to McKay's Trojans in the Rose Bowl, was third in the major college voting.

The runnerup in the small college category was Bus Merkes of Drake University.

The coaches of the year were chosen from eight nominees in each category, selected geographically.

Other major nominees were Bob Blackman, Dartmouth; Charles (Rip) Engle, Penn State; Bill Murray, Duke; Bob Devaney, Nebraska; and Darrell Royal of Texas.

Others on the small college ballot were Clarence Boston of New Hampshire; Hanely Painter, Lenoir Rhyne; Alonzo (Jake) Gathier, Florida A&M; Howard Fletcher, Northern Illinois; James Higgins, Lamar Tech, and Don Warhurst, California Poly of Pomona.

Don Lund Named Coach Of Year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Lund, former major league outfielder who led the University of Michigan to the national collegiate championship, was named coach of the year Sunday night by the American Association of College Baseball Coaches.

The 39-year-old Lund, who since has left Michigan to become farm director for the Detroit Tigers, received the award at the baseball coaches' annual banquet.

$25,000 Open Golf Draws Top Players

By HAL WOOD
UPI Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—The touring golf professionals take their second crack of the year at gold and glory when they tee off Thursday in the $25,000 San Diego open tournament.

With Arnold Palmer, winner of the rich Los Angeles Open, sitting this one out, San Diego fans have turned to one of their hometown favorites, Gene Littler, Billy Casper or Phil Rodgers, to come home a winner.

Littler, the first day leader at Los Angeles, and Rodgers, who was the defending champion there, finished in a five-way tie for fourth place and each collected $2,120. They had 72-hole scores of 278.

Casper finished one stroke back of them and picked up $1,358 for his week's work—which isn't bad if you can't win.

The defending champion is Tommy Jacobs, who beat Johnny Pott in a play-off last year after they had tied over the regulation distance. Two years ago Palmer beat Al Balding in a play-off for the crown.

Among the favorites to win this title must be South African Gary Player and the Canadian, Balding, who usually plays this course well. Player and Balding tied for second at Los Angeles, three strokes behind Palmer with 277 scores—good enough to pick up $3,800 each.

Finals of this 72-hole event will be played on Sunday. And next week the tourists move on to Pebble Beach and Bing Crosby's annual clambake.

Dick Howser Signs With Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Shortstop Dick Howser has become the first member of the Kansas City Athletics to sign his 1963 contract, the American League baseball club announced Wednesday.

The Athletics' front office said Howser's injured thumb was expected to be mended by the start of the 1963 season. The speedy infielder currently is serving as an instructor at a baseball school in West Palm Beach, Fla.

BRAINY BASEBALLERS

ST. Louis (UPI) — Two St. Louis Cardinal baseball players are employed at Washington University out of season.

MAYBE they should have called Rogers Hornsby "Mr. Baseball." For baseball and only baseball was his life, now snuffed out at 66.

There's no question about his ranking as the greatest righthanded hitter of all time, for his record and his career batting average of .358 solidifies that. And there isn't much question about his great love for the game through a long career as player, manager, coach and teacher.

Rogers was an outspoken individual, frank and revealing. When he had something to say, which was any time you cornered him, he said it no matter where the chips fell.

He loved to sit in hotel lobbies and talk baseball. He would have none of the other sports, like golf, although he loved the horses, bet 'em and lost money on them although he would tell you that the stock market hit him worse than the nags.

Rogers loved to play baseball as a kid and was the star of a stock yards team in Texas.

He was purchased as a teen-ager by a Cardinal scout for $500 in 1915 and from then on baseball was his business, and he played, managed and coached it as his business.

Rogers wouldn't hesitate to rip apart a teammate, or an opponent. But he also added compliments when he thought the player deserved it.

• • •

AS A MANAGER he was the boss, and let the club owner know it. He looked upon the modern-day hot-shots with tempered scorn, except for a few.

In an incident, in Florida last spring, he was asked to pose with Roger Maris, the 61-homer hitter, but Maris, irked at Hornsby's comments about his hitting, turned his back on him.

Hornsby, who had earlier pooh-poohed Maris' hitting because of his .269 batting average, roared at Maris: "I always thought you were a busher. Now I know it."

When Rogers first came up to the majors he was a skinny kid, but Miller Huggins, manager of the Cards at the time, put him on a rich diet and Rogers spent the winter eating and sleeping. He picked up 30 pounds. Huggins also helped Rogers change his style of hitting.

In his first full season, in 1916, he hit .313. From then on, until 1931, Rogers hit .300 or more every year except one. And three times he hit over .400.

He was a singles and doubles hitter, but he might have been a home run slugger if he had wanted to wait for the right pitch every time. Twice he did win the home run title in the National League and hit 302 round-trippers for his career.

As a manager he served five clubs and won a pennant for the Cards in 1926.

With 1963 here, who will be the first sports scribe to predict flatly that the New York Yankees will do it again? (Not us. We're the kind who sends an income tax return in on April 14.)

We will make one prediction and you can say you saw it here first. The New York Mets will NOT win the pennant in 1963.

There isn't any truth to the rumor that the Bureau of Missing Persons, Sports Division, is trying to find out where Jerry Lucas is.

Duke Tops Navy For Eleventh Victory, 85-70

Heyman, Mullins Spark Triumph

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Duke's one-two scoring punch of Art Heyman and Jeff Mullins combined for a total of 52 points Wednesday to give the Blue Devils an 85-70 victory over Navy.

Duke, now with an 11-2 record, scored 32 field goals, only one more than Navy, but cushioned its win with 21 foul shots to the Middies' eight.

Navy outshot Duke from the field in the first half, but the Blue Devils' 13-3 margin from the foul line gave them a 41-33 halftime lead.

Behind by 12 points during a span of seven minutes in the first half, Navy rallied slightly for two baskets by Ron [illegible]rwilliger and a field goal by John Mahoney to cut Duke's lead to 33-27 with 2:45 left in the half.

However, Heyman, who scored a game high of 28 points, and Mullins, who netted 24, killed the surge at the start of the second half and quickly pushed Duke to a commanding 49-35 lead.

Navy, led by Mahoney's 18 points, had four of its starting team score in double figures. It was Navy's fifth loss in nine games.

Prospects Are Dim For NBA Expansion

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The president of the National Basketball Association says he sees little prospect that the league will grant additional franchises when it meets in Los Angeles next week.

Maurice Podoloff said in New York City that a lack of sufficient talent from collegiate ranks was one of the prime factors standing in the way of league expansion.

Carl Yastrzemski, the Red Sox outfielder, lost 24 pounds during the 1962 season. He was suffering from jaundice.

Policy Adopted By NCAA Would Boycott AAU

4-Point Program Given Approval

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The National Collegiate Athletic Association adopted Wednesday as its official policy a four-point program which would limit college athletes to events it favors.

The NCAA has been engaged in a bitter war—now headed for arbitration—with the rival Amateur Athletic Union for control of amateur sports. Wednesday's policy, if carried out strictly, could amount to a boycott of AAU events not sanctioned by the NCAA.

Delegates at the closing session of the NCAA's 57th annual convention gave unanimous approval to the policy, expressed in a resolution presented by the Rev. Wilfred Crowley of the University of Santa Clara.

Father Crowley is secretary-treasurer of the NCAA and a leading college spokesman for the new U.S. Track and Field Federation created last year by the NCAA.

Amendment Withdrawn

His resolution came to a vote after withdrawal of an amendment that would have provided penalties to collegians for entering track and field competition not sanctioned by the federation.

It first calls for reaffirmation by the NCAA of the federation, created during the dispute with the AAU; asks member institutions to support only those meets and tournaments sanctioned by the federation, and then pledges adoption as policy of the four-point recommendation made to all member institutions last Oct. 24.

The four call for:

1. Member colleges to withdraw from membership in the AAU until the AAU indicates a cooperative attitude toward federation members.

2. Member colleges not to enter athletes or teams in AAU competition unless the event is sanctioned by the appropriate federation.

3. Staff personnel of member schools to withdraw from AAU committees in basketball, gymnastics and track and field.

4. Institutional facilities and equipment to be utilized to the maximum to further federation activity.

May Use Facilities

The fourth step provides that the AAU may use the facilities and equipment if it joins the federation movement, under the charter of which it has equal voting power with the NCAA; or if it enters into a sanctioned agreement.

Robert Ray of the State University of Iowa was elected NCAA president, succeeding Dr. Henry Hadrt of Texas Christian University.

Next year's convention was set for New York City Jan. 3-8.

Hawkins May Play With Globetrotters

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — At least four members of the now defunct Pittsburgh Rens will continue to play professional basketball.

Connie Hawkins, the most valuable player in the American Basketball League last year, will probably go with the Harlem Globetrotters, Rens' General Manager Joe Gordon said.

Gordon also said that Jim McCoy and Walt Mangham, a pair of Marquette grads, would play for Williamsport in the Eastern League and former Cincinnati All-America Bob Weisenhahn will play for Dayton in the Midwest League.

Phil Rollins and Charley Tyra, two ex-Louisville University standouts, have returned there to work in the real estate and insurance field.

Whitey Bell, from North Carolina State, has returned to sales work and Hank Whitney, Iowa St., will teach physical education in Brooklyn, N. Y., his home.

Three Records Set

Major league attendance increased 13 per cent in 1962 over 1961 while reaching an all-time high of 21,375,217.

Two other attendance records were broken last year. The Los Angeles Dodgers set a standard for home attendance in a season, 2,755,184, and the New York Yankees established a new pinnacle for road attendance, 2,221,209.

Woodling To Quit Mets, To Join Yanks As Coach

Gene Is Expected To Replace Moses On New York Club

NEW YORK (UPI) — Outfielder Gene Woodling, who played for five New York Yankee championship teams between 1949 and 1954, is expected to rejoin his old club as a coach.

Woodling, it was reported on Wednesday, will ask for his release from the New York Mets to take the job.

Indications are that Woodling will replace Wally Moses as first base and batting coach, with Moses being assigned to a job as batting instructor in the Yankees' farm system. Woodling's appointment probably will be announced after the New York newspaper strike is settled.

Woodling, who started the 1962 season with the Washington Senators, batted .274 for the Mets in 81 games. The 40-year-old outfielder had played for four clubs since being traded by the Yanks to the Baltimore Orioles in 1955.

The departure of Woodling, following Richie Ashburn's decision to quit baseball for a sportscaster's job, would leave the Mets with only four outfielders. The quartet, all right-handed batters, are Joe Christopher, Frank Thomas, Jim Hickman and rookie Dick Smith.

Shenandoah Downs Opens First Winter Meeting Tomorrow

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va. — Shenandoah Downs opens its first winter meeting tomorrow with Dorothy W. Turner's Silver Song facing her stiffest competition ever in the National Captial Purse at 5½ furlongs.

The gray daughter of Royal Note holds the Shenandoah track record of 1:04 2/5 for the 5½-furlong distance of the feature, but should be hard pressed in the field of nine.

Operated primarily as a night track since it was opened in 1959, Shenandoah Downs will switch to the conventional 1 p.m. post time for the 20-day winter session, and will run nine races daily. The track, which pioneered pool wagering here in 1960, also will offer the twin double.

Shenandoah's nine-race betting mark of a little over $580,714 is almost certain to tumble Saturday as the track offers the only racing north of Miami. Along with that mark also would go the daily double pool record of $42,000 and the single race high of $60,000.

There also is a good chance that the all-time West Virginia betting record of $880,624 will be broken. That high was set at the Shenandoah Downs doubleheader last Labor Day when the track ran two complete nine-race cards.

Wilhelm Sets Pace

Hoyt Wilhelm, of the Baltimore Orioles, and Harry Brecheen, Birds' coach, rank one and four, respectively, in lifetime earned run average among all pitchers who have worked in the lively ball era (since 1920). Hoyt leads with 2.74, followed by Whitey Ford at 2.79, former Yankee Spud Chandler at 2.84 and Brecheen, who logged a 2.92 ERA over 11 major seasons.

McKay Named Major College Coach Of Year

John Edwards Best In Small Colleges

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John McKay of the University of Southern California and John Edwards of Wittenberg College (Springfield, Ohio) Wednesday were selected as the major and small college coaches of 1962 by the American Football Coaches Association.

McKay coached Southern California to an undefeated season which earned the Trojans the national championship, and also led USC to a Rose Bowl triumph.

The announcement came during the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) convention.

McKay was a runaway winner in the balloting by 2,300 members of the coaches association. Runnerup was Johnny Vaught of Mississippi. Although the actual ballot was not disclosed, McKay's margin was reported the largest in the 28 year history of the coach of the year competition.

Milt Bruhn of Wisconsin, whose Badgers lost a thrilling 42 - 37 decision to McKay's Trojans in the Rose Bowl, was third in the major college voting.

The runnerup in the small college category was Bus Merkes of Drake University.

The coaches of the year were chosen from eight nominees in each category, selected geographically.

Other major nominees were Bob Blackman, Dartmouth; Charles (Rip) Engle, Penn State; Bill Murray, Duke; Bob Devaney, Nebraska; and Darrell Royal of Texas.

Others on the small college ballot were Clarence Boston of New Hampshire; Hanely Painter, Lenoir Rhyne; Alonzo (Jake) Gathier, Florida A&M; Howard Fletcher, Northern Illinois; James Higgins, Lamar Tech, and Don Warhurst, California Poly of Pomona.

Don Lund Named Coach Of Year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Lund, former major league outfielder who led the University of Michigan to the national collegiate championship, was named coach of the year Sunday night by the American Association of College Baseball Coaches.

The 39-year-old Lund, who since has left Michigan to become farm director for the Detroit Tigers, received the award at the baseball coaches' annual banquet.

Touring Pros Tee Off Today At San Diego

$25,000 Open Golf Draws Top Players

By HAL WOOD
UPI Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—The touring golf professionals take their second crack of the year at gold and glory when they tee off Thursday in the $25,000 San Diego open tournament.

With Arnold Palmer, winner of the rich Los Angeles Open, sitting this one out, San Diego fans have turned to one of their hometown favorites, Gene Littler. Billy Casper or Phil Rodgers, to come home a winner.

Littler, the first day leader at Los Angeles, and Rodgers, who was the defending champion there, finished in a five-way tie for fourth place and each collected $2,120. They had 72-hole scores of 278.

Casper finished one stroke back of them and picked up $1,358 for his week's work—which isn't bad if you can't win.

The defending champion is Tommy Jacobs, who beat Johnny Pott in a play-off last year after they had tied over the regulation distance. Two years ago Palmer beat Al Balding in a play-off for the crown.

Among the favorites to win this title must be South African Gary Player and the Canadian, Balding, who usually plays this course well. Player and Balding tied for second at Los Angeles, three strokes behind Palmer with 277 scores—good enough to pick up $3,800 each.

Finals of this 72-hole event will be played on Sunday. And next week the tourists move on to Pebble Beach and Bing Crosby's annual clambake.

Dick Howser Signs With Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Shortstop Dick Howser has become the first member of the Kansas City Athletics to sign his 1963 contract, the American League baseball club announced Wednesday.

Howser, 25-year-old captain of the A's, was named rookie of the year in 1961, but he saw only limited duty last season after breaking his thumb in June.

The Athletics' front office said Howser's injured thumb was expected to be mended by the start of the 1963 season. The speedy infielder currently is serving as an instructor at a baseball school in West Palm Beach, Fla.

ST. Louis (UPI) — Two St. Louis Cardinal baseball players are employed at Washington University out of season.

SPORTS SPUTTERINGS

By Walter L. Johns, Central Press Sports Editor

MAYBE they should have called Rogers Hornsby "Mr. Baseball." For baseball and only baseball was his life, now snuffed out at 66.

There's no question about his ranking as the greatest righthanded hitter of all time, for his record and his career batting average of .358 solidifies that. And there isn't much question about his great love for the game through a long career as player, manager, coach and teacher.

Rogers was an outspoken individual, frank and revealing. When he had something to say, which was any time you cornered him, he said it no matter where the chips fell.

He loved to sit in hotel lobbies and talk baseball. He would have none of the other sports, like golf, although he loved the horses, bet 'em and lost money on them although he would tell you that the stock market hit him worse than the nags.

Rogers loved to play baseball as a kid and was the star of a stock yards team in Texas.

He was purchased as a teen-ager by a Cardinal scout for $500 in 1915 and from then on baseball was his business, and he played, managed and coached it as his business.

Rogers wouldn't hesitate to rip apart a teammate, or an opponent. But he also added compliments when he thought the player deserved it.

• • •

AS A MANAGER he was the boss, and let the club owner know it. He looked upon the modern-day hot-shots with tempered scorn, except for a few.

In an incident, in Florida last spring, he was asked to pose with Roger Maris, the 61-homer hitter, but Maris, irked at Hornsby's comments about his hitting, turned his back on him.

Hornsby, who had earlier pooh-poohed Maris' hitting because of his .269 batting average, roared at Maris: "I always thought you were a busher. Now I know it."

When Rogers first came up to the majors he was a skinny kid, but Miller Huggins, manager of the Cards at the time, put him on a rich diet and Rogers spent the winter eating and sleeping. He picked up 30 pounds. Huggins also helped Rogers change his style of hitting.

In his first full season, in 1916, he hit .313. From then on, until 1931, Rogers hit .300 or more every year except one. And three times he hit over .400.

He was a singles and doubles hitter, but he might have been a home run slugger if he had wanted to wait for the right pitch every time. Twice he did win the home run title in the National League and hit 302 round-trippers for his career.

As a manager he served five clubs and won a pennant for the Cards in 1926.

Patterson-Liston Return Bout To Be Staged April 4 At Miami Beach

Resort City's Convention Hall Site Of Match

Champ Allegedly Ignorant Of Plans For Title Scrap

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tom Bolan announced Wednesday night that the return Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight championship fight will be staged at the Miami Beach Convention Hall April 4, "unless some last-minute unforeseen difficulties prevent it."

Bolan is president of Championship Sports, Inc. (CSI).

He emphasized that despite Liston's first-round knockout in winning the crown from Patterson at Chicago, Sept. 25, Sonny demanded another return match in case Patterson recaptures the title at Miami Beach.

First To Regain Title

Patterson became the first man in ring history to win back the heavy title when he took it from Ingemar Johansson on a sixth-round knockout at Miami Beach, March 16, 1961.

"Liston made such a point of this return-bout contract," explained Bolan, "that we had to give it to him and his advisor, Jack Nilon."

But at Chicago, Liston grimly declared he knew nothing about the April 4 fight at Miami Beach and that "whoever is making noises about it had better talk to me before they get into this too deep."

Liston previously has objected several times to CSI as the return-match promoter, although their Chicago return-bout contract gave Patterson the right to pick the promoter.

Bolan Is Amazed

When Bolan was informed of Liston's alleged ignorance of plans for the Miami Beach fight, he said: "I'm amazed at Sonny's remarks. We informed Nilon on Sunday that Patterson had picked Miami Beach for April 4. And we gave Nilon a written notice to that effect on Tuesday."

Bolan then emphasized: "We know that only Nilon represents Liston because we received a letter from Sonny a few weeks ago, reassuring us of that."

Bolan gave his qualified announcement Wednesday night after Patterson's attorney and advisor, Julius November, had made an earlier unqualified disclosure of the city and site.

Immediately after November's statement, a New York bookmaker announced that Liston would be favored at a price ranging between 4-1 and 7-1.

When Nilon heard of November's announcement, he phoned the United Press International from Chester, Pa., and angrily declared: "That announcement is premature. There are some things that haven't been settled yet—things that Liston hasn't approved yet."

Patterson Picked Site

Patterson picked Miami Beach over four other cities that had been considered: Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Las Vegas, Nev., Bolan said.

In the April fight, Patterson will be engaging in his 11th title fight and seeking his 38th victory in 41 professional bouts. His three defeats were on a decision to former light heavyweight champion Joey Maxim, on a third-round knockout by Johansson in their first fight in 1959 and a first round KO by Liston in September.

Liston will be making his first title defense and seeking his 27th straight victory. He won 34 of his previous 35 bouts, 24 by knockouts. He never was stopped nor floored.

Cub Hurlers Sign, Including Jackson

CHICAGO (UPI) —The Chicago Cubs Wednesday reported the signing of five more pitchers including one veteran.

The veteran pitcher is Larry Jackson, obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals in an Oct. 17 trade. Jackson had a 16-11 record last year, winning seven of his last eight decisions.

Also signed Wednesday were righthanders Fred Burdette, 26, and Jack Warner, 22, and lefthanders Morris Steevens, 22, and Wayne Carlander, 21.

Burdette, Warner and Steevens played most of last season with San Antonio and saw brief action with the Cubs at the end of the season.

Eddie Sachs First Entry In 500 Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Eddie Sachs, runnerup in 1961 and third last year, Wednesday became the first driver entered for the 47th annual 500-mile Speedway auto race.

Sachs, the former Pennsylvanian who now makes his home at Fraser, Mich., will drive a new roadster built by A. J. Watson for three Indianapolis businessmen.

Sachs won the pole position for the 1960 and 1961 Memorial Day classics and has started in the front row four times.

Nats' General Manager Selkirk Finds The Toughest Positions

By FRANK ECK
AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

If knowing the ropes about front office procedure in baseball and how to size up talent on the playing field are required to produce a winner, George (Twinkletoes) Selkirk ought to become a success in his new job.

The man who replaced Babe Ruth as a right fielder for the 1935 Yankees, however, has a rather Herculean task. He is general manager of the Washington Senators which is like being boss of the New York Mets in the other league.

Since the former Washington team moved to Minneapolis-St. Paul for the start of the 1961 season, the Senators have been 10th in the American League. Last year they were 35½ games back. Worse yet, they were 11½ games behind Kansas City, considered by many as a faltering franchise.

Selkirk has a two-year contract and if his popularity with contemporaries helps, Twink has a good start. Just prior to the winter meetings at Rochester, N. Y., Selkirk knew all about the tough job he and the Senators are facing for 1963. Since 1956 he has been an American League front office man.

"Detroit offered us three players in a deal," the 54-year-old GM began. "But the top man of the three hit only .228. You can't build a ball club on that kind of talent, or the kind I've seen on the draft list."

After the meetings Selkirk said: "I wish I could rave about some of our youngsters but I can't honestly put a finger on anyone who is about to make it. The rookies we have may be a year away. We will try to help the team by purchase. We can't be any worse than we were last season."

The Senators could have drafted nine players at "bargain prices" at the Rochester meetings. They had the money—and room on the roster. But Selkirk couldn't see tossing money around for players who at best might be two or three years away. Yet he did draft five players from the minor leagues for a total of $73,000.

Selkirk left a good position with the Baltimore Orioles to take over in Washington under E. R. (Pete) Quesada, the club president. Quesada gave Selkirk a free hand to make deals. It was one of the strong reasons that prompted Selkirk to acceptance of the most challenging jobs in the major leagues. However, the native of Huntsville, Ont., will consult Quesada and Manager Mickey Vernon before making any trades.

Selkirk would have liked it that way had he ever been fortunate enough to manage in the majors. He is a chap who treats others with respect.

In nine years with the Yankees, Selkirk played 846 games. He never was expected to come close to Babe Ruth's slugging feats but the handsome Selkirk proved a steady hitter. After taking over for Ruth to hit .312 in 128 games in 1935. He compiled a .293 career mark. In the 1936 World Series, his first, he hit two home runs—one off Carl Hubbell and the other off Hal Schumacher.

After retiring as a player in 1942, Selkirk remained with the Yankees to manage their farm teams in Newark, N. J., Binghamton, N. Y., and Kansas City. In 1953 he managed Toledo and led Milwaukee's then No. 1 farm team to the American Association pennant.

In '56 he went to Kansas City as player personnel director. Then it was on to Baltimore as field coordinator under Lee MacPhail, Oriole president.

Selkirk's baseball travels may be ended for some time to come. At least he hopes so. He also hopes that people will forget one of sports oldest slogans about Washington:

First in peace, last in the American League.

Amateur Bodies Ready To Let MacArthur Arbitrate Dispute

General Feels Confident Hassle Will Be Settled

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy informed Gen. Douglas MacArthur Wednesday that both sides are ready for the general to arbitrate the 2½-year-old dispute over control of U.S. amateur sports.

In a telegram to MacArthur in New York, Kennedy said the National Collegiate Athletic Association will be represented by the United States Track and Field Federation in its arbitration with the Amateur Athletic Union.

"May I again express my deep appreciation for your willingness to take on this matter," the President told MacArthur.

The 82-year-old five-star general expressed confidence that a "Mutually satisfactory settlement" would result and said he would call the arbitration panel together as soon as convenient.

Kennedy had announced early last month that he was asking MacArthur to take on the task. This followed efforts by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy to bring the opposing factions into compromise.

The President said the deadlock between the AAU and the NCAA-backed federation threatens proper representation by America in the Pan-American Games at Sao Paolo, Brazil, in April and in the Olympic Games in Tokyo next year.

Since the President broached his idea, efforts have been made to get both sides to go along with it. The AAU agreed some time ago. It was only Tuesday that the NCAA meeting in Los Angeles, worked out with the Federation agreement to join in the peace talks.

The crux of the dispute lies in the fact that the colleges produce most of the track, basketball and gymnastic athletes, but the AAU controls their participation in international sports.

This resulted in formation a year ago of the U.S. Track and Field Federation, mainly from the NCAA, but also with representation from high schools, junior colleges and other groups, including the YMCA. Provision is made in the Federation charter for membership by the AAU as well, but it has not accepted.

Pagliaroni Signs

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Pirates signed catcher Jim Pagliaroni, obtained in a winter trade with the Boston Redsox, to a 1963 contract Wednesday.

Pagliaroni batted .258 and hit 11 homers for the Redsox last season. In 1960, the 25-year-old backstop hit .306 in 28 games.

The Pirates also announced the signing of pitcher Andy Occihionere of Montreal with Burlington, Ia., and pitcher Marcel Blais, Verdun, Quebec, with Batavia, N.Y.

Outsider May Wind Up With Hickok Belt

Taylor, Wills, Terry, Tittle, Palmer Tops

By STEVE SNIDER
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — An outsider may wind up with the $10,000 Hickok belt as "professional athlete of the year."

Jimmy Taylor of the Green Bay Packers, who hasn't yet won one of the 11 previous monthly awards last year, is a hot candidate for the honor and the loot that goes with the gem-encrusted belt presented annually to the year's top pro.

Little Maury Wills of the Los Angeles Dodgers, Y. A. Tittle of the football Giants, Ralph Terry of the New York Yankees and golfer Arnold Palmer are among the potentially big vote-getters. Results will be announced at Rochester, N.Y., Jan. 21.

Taylor, of course, could lose his status as an outsider if he wins the December award in balloting now underway. Leading scorer and ball carrier in the National Football League, the Packer fullback also was a key man in Green Bay's victory over the Giants in the championship playoff Dec. 30.

The timing of Taylor's achievements is about the only edge he has over the other leaders in the field.

Tough On Voters

"This is a tough year for the voters," says Murray Goodman, who has counted the ballots for the Hickok people over the last 12 years. "There are plenty of great pro athletes but not one that hits you right in the eye.

"Something bad, as well as something good, happened to nearly all the 11 monthly winners."

Wilt Chamberlain of basketball's San Francisco Warriors, winner in January and again in March, is playing for a loser. Auto drivers Glenn Roberts (February) and Rodger Ward (May) are operating in a sport that commands less public attention than others.

Palmer, winner in April for his third Masters tournament triumph, lost a couple of big ones this year to Jack Nicklaus. June winner, pitcher Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers, suffered a finger injury that knocked him out of business at the height of his production.

Don Drysdale of the Dodgers won in July but in September couldn't supply the one pitching victory he needed to get into the World Series. August winner Jack Sanford of the San Francisco Giants was a World Series loser. Tittle, the November winner for pushing the Giants toward a conference title, was trapped the same way in a losing playoff against the Packers.

Wills Has Chance

Wills also was a Dodger loser but his 104 base thefts, breaking Ty Cobb's old mark of 96, was a fantastic performance that already has brought him several year-end awards. Little Maury won the September Hickok award and rates no worse than an even choice with Taylor for the grand prize.

Maury's edge, if any, rests with the popularity of baseball — and the high regard for baseball records held by many of the voters.

Terry, winner in October as the World Series hero, nevertheless seems to lack enough support to put him over despite a 23-victory regular season.

"I'm glad someone else does the voting," says Goodman. "But the 150 ballots we'll soon be counting represent a good cross-section not only of the nation but of all the professional sports.

"The guy that's picked will deserve that big belt."

International Teams Will Play 152 Games

NEW YORK (UPI) —The 10-team International League, two new clubs and a two-division circuit, will meet in Indianapolis, Jan. 23, to adopt a new 152-game schedule for the 1963 season, it was announced Thursday.

League President Tommy Richardson said IL officials approved the slate earlier this week. The season would begin April 17 and close Sept. 2.

Little Rock and Indianapolis are the two new clubs added to the league. They will play in the IL's Southern Division, along with Columbus, Atlanta and Jacksonville. The Northern Division is made up of Buffalo, Richmond, Rochester, Toronto and Syracuse.

Tony Yates Is Like Quarterback For Bearcat Basketball Champs

By FRANK ECK
AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

After the University of Cincinnati won its first NCAA basketball championship in Ed Jucker's freshman season as a coach there appeared in the 1961-62 Bearcat brochure a note on Tony Yates.

"A smooth and steady performer as a sophomore, Yates should retain his backcourt post on the first unit," said the note. Further along in the basketball booklet was this background on Yates:

"Unquestionably the most underrated player in America, and without equal on defense, according to Jucker."

Yates now has a chance to become one of the few collegians who ever played on three NCAA championship teams in a row. All Cincinnati has to do is win its third straight NCAA title.

Yates is a 175-pound 6-foot-1 guard from Cincinnati. He doesn't score many points but he plays defense better than most men.

"Too much emphasis is placed on scoring averages," says Jucker. "As a result a fine player like Yates doesn't get one tenth of the credit he really deserves.

"There's no secret to the defensive job he always gives us. Tony just plays his man 'nose-to-nose' and never eases up. He's not exceptionally fast but he reacts well and can anticipate an opponent's move. He's what coaches call a 'heady' player and that's the kind we love to have around."

Yates averaged only 30 minutes playing time a game as a sophomore two seasons ago but since midway of last season, Jucker calls Yates his quarterback. Tony calls the plays and sets them up when the Bearcats have the ball.

When Cincinnati first upset Ohio State, 70-65, in the spring of 1961 for its first of two thrilling finals against the Buckeyes, it was Yates who sank three straight fouls to seal Ohio State's doom.

At 25, Yates is old as college players go. Had it not been for the GI bill he might not be in college today.

After graduation from Lockland Wayne High in Cincinnati, Yates entered the Air Force. He spent almost all of his four years at Ellsworth Air Force Base, S. D. He played basketball there.

After his discharge in 1959 Tony headed for Cincinnati. George Smith, then head basketball coach and now athletic director, explained that because of his age Yates was a great risk as far as an athletic grant-in-aid was concerned.

Yates was on his own as a freshman. However, Smith gave him hope of a full athletic grant if he proved he could play basketball. He proved it. He was the playmaker for a freshman team that compiled a 14-1 record.

Cincinnati has gone through the early part of its schedule as the nation's No. 1 team and Coach Jucker will tell any listeners that Yates is one of the big reasons.

Patterson-Liston Return Bout To Be Staged April 4 At Miami Beach

Resort City's Convention Hall Site Of Match

Champ Allegedly Ignorant Of Plans For Title Scrap

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tom Bolan announced Wednesday night that the return Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight championship fight will be staged at the Miami Beach Convention Hall April 4, "unless some last-minute unforeseen difficulties prevent it."

Bolan is president of Championship Sports, Inc. (CSI).

He emphasized that despite Liston's first-round knockout in winning the crown from Patterson at Chicago, Sept. 25, Sonny demanded another return match in case Patterson recaptures the title at Miami Beach.

First To Regain Title

Patterson became the first man in ring history to win back the heavy title when he took it from Ingemar Johansson on a sixth-round knockout at Miami Beach, March 16, 1961.

"Liston made such a point of this return-bout contract," explained Bolan, "that we had to give it to him and his advisor, Jack Nilon."

But at Chicago, Liston grimly declared he knew nothing about the April 4 fight at Miami Beach and that "whoever is making noises about it had better talk to me before they get into this too deep."

Liston previously has objected several times to CSI as the return-match promoter, although their Chicago return-bout contract gave Patterson the right to pick the promoter.

Bolan Is Amazed

When Bolan was informed of Liston's alleged ignorance of plans for the Miami Beach fight, he said: "I'm amazed at Sonny's remarks. We informed Nilon on Sunday that Patterson had picked Miami Beach for April 4. And we gave Nilon a written notice to that effect on Tuesday."

Bolan then emphasized: "We know that only Nilon represents Liston because we received a letter from Sonny a few weeks ago, reassuring us of that."

Bolan gave his qualified announcement Wednesday night after Patterson's attorney and advisor, Julius November, had made an earlier unqualified disclosure of the city and site.

Immediately after November's statement, a New York bookmaker announced that Liston would be favored at a price ranging between 4-1 and 7-1.

When Nilon heard of November's announcement, he phoned the United Press International from Chester, Pa., and angrily declared: "That announcement is premature. There are some things that haven't been settled yet—things that Liston hasn't approved yet."

Patterson Picked Site

Patterson picked Miami Beach over four other cities that had been considered: Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Las Vegas, Nev., Bolan said.

In the April fight, Patterson will be engaging in his 11th title fight and seeking his 38th victory in 41 professional bouts. His three defeats were on a decision to former light heavyweight champion Joey Maxim, on a third-round knockout by Johansson in their first fight in 1959 and a first round KO by Liston in September.

Liston will be making his first title defense and seeking his 27th straight victory. He won 34 of his previous 35 bouts, 24 by knockouts. He never was stopped nor floored.

Cub Hurlers Sign, Including Jackson

CHICAGO (UPI) —The Chicago Cubs Wednesday reported the signing of five more pitchers including one veteran.

The veteran pitcher is Larry Jackson, obtained from the St. Louis Cardinals in an Oct. 17 trade. Jackson had a 16-11 record last year, winning seven of his last eight decisions.

Also signed Wednesday were righthanders Fred Burdette, 26, and Jack Warner, 22, and lefthanders Morris Steevens, 22, and Wayne Carlander, 21.

Burdette, Warner and Steevens played most of last season with San Antonio and saw brief action with the Cubs at the end of the season.

Eddie Sachs First Entry In 500 Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Eddie Sachs, runnerup in 1961 and third last year, Wednesday became the first driver entered for the 47th annual 500-mile Speedway auto race.

Sachs, the former Pennsylvanian who now makes his home at Fraser, Mich., will drive a new roadster built by A. J. Watson for three Indianapolis businessmen.

Sachs won the pole position for the 1960 and 1961 Memorial Day classics and has started in the front row four times.

Nats' General Manager Selkirk Finds The Toughest Positions

By FRANK ECK
AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

If knowing the ropes about front office procedure in baseball and how to size up talent on the playing field are required to produce a winner, George (Twinkletoes) Selkirk ought to become a success in his new job.

The man who replaced Babe Ruth as a right fielder for the 1935 Yankees, however, has a rather Herculean task. He is general manager of the Washington Senators which is like being boss of the New York Mets in the other league.

Since the former Washington team moved to Minneapolis-St. Paul for the start of the 1961 season, the Senators have been 10th in the American League. Last year they were 35½ games back. Worse yet, they were 11½ games behind Kansas City, considered by many as a faltering franchise.

Selkirk has a two-year contract and if his popularity with contemporaries helps, Twink has a good start. Just prior to the winter meetings at Rochester, N. Y., Selkirk knew all about the tough job he and the Senators are facing for 1963. Since 1956 he has been an American League front office man.

"Detroit offered us three players in a deal," the 54-year-old GM began. "But the top man of the three hit only .228. You can't build a ball club on that kind of talent, or the kind I've seen on the draft list."

After the meetings Selkirk said: "I wish I could rave about some of our youngsters but I can't honestly put a finger on anyone who is about to make it. The rookies we have may be a year away. We will try to help the team by purchase. We can't be any worse than we were last season."

The Senators could have drafted nine players at "bargain prices" at the Rochester meetings. They had the money—and room on the roster. But Selkirk couldn't see tossing money around for players who at best might be two or three years away. Yet he did draft five players from the minor leagues for a total of $73,000.

Selkirk left a good position with the Baltimore Orioles to take over in Washington under E. R. (Pete) Quesada, the club president. Quesada gave Selkirk a free hand to make deals. It was one of the strong reasons that prompted Selkirk to acceptance of the most challenging jobs in the major leagues. However, the native of Huntsville, Ont., will consult Quesada and Manager Mickey Vernon before making any trades.

Selkirk would have liked it that way had he ever been fortunate enough to manage in the majors. He is a chap who treats others with respect.

In nine years with the Yankees, Selkirk played 846 games. He never was expected to come close to Babe Ruth's slugging feats but the handsome Selkirk proved a steady hitter. After taking over for Ruth to hit .312 in 128 games in 1935. He compiled a .293 career mark. In the 1936 World Series, his first, he hit two home runs—one off Carl Hubbell and the other off Hal Schumacher.

After retiring as a player in 1942, Selkirk remained with the Yankees to manage their farm teams in Newark, N. J., Binghamton, N. Y., and Kansas City. In 1953 he managed Toledo and led Milwaukee's then No. 1 farm team to the American Association pennant.

In '56 he went to Kansas City as player personnel director. Then it was on to Baltimore as field coordinator under Lee MacPhail, Oriole president.

Selkirk's baseball travels may be ended for some time to come. At least he hopes so. He also hopes that people will forget one of sports oldest slogans about Washington:

First in peace, last in the American League.

Amateur Bodies Ready To Let MacArthur Arbitrate Dispute

General Feels Confident Hassle Will Be Settled

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy informed Gen. Douglas MacArthur Wednesday that both sides are ready for the general to arbitrate the 2½-year-old dispute over control of U.S. amateur sports.

In a telegram to MacArthur in New York, Kennedy said the National Collegiate Athletic Association will be represented by the United States Track and Field Federation in its arbitration with the Amateur Athletic Union.

"May I again express my deep appreciation for your willingness to take on this matter," the President told MacArthur.

The 82-year-old five-star general expressed confidence that a "Mutually satisfactory settlement" would result and said he would call the arbitration panel together as soon as convenient.

Kennedy had announced early last month that he was asking MacArthur to take on the task. This followed efforts by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy to bring the opposing factions into compromise.

The President said the deadlock between the AAU and the NCAA-backed federation threatens proper representation by America in the Pan-American Games at Sao Paolo, Brazil, in April and in the Olympic Games in Tokyo next year.

Since the President broached his idea, efforts have been made to get both sides to go along with it. The AAU agreed some time ago. It was only Tuesday that the NCAA meeting in Los Angeles, worked out with the Federation agreement to join in the peace talks.

The crux of the dispute lies in the fact that the colleges produce most of the track, basketball and gymnastic athletes, but the AAU controls their participation in international sports.

This resulted in formation a year ago of the U.S. Track and Field Federation, mainly from the NCAA, but also with representation from high schools, junior colleges and other groups, including the YMCA. Provision is made in the Federation charter for membership by the AAU as well, but it has not accepted.

Colts To Discuss Training Site Segregation

BALTIMORE (AP) — Don Kellett, general manager of the Baltimore Colts, said Wednesday he plans to meet again with town officials in Westminster, Md., to discuss a complaint about segregated facilities there.

The National Football League club has conducted its pre-season training at the Western Maryland College campus in Westminster the past 10 years.

Kellett said he would go to Westminster in about one month. He said a decision on the site of the training camp for 1963 will not be made until after April 1.

The Baltimore branch of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) had asked the Colts in December to move the training camp elsewhere if the management did not succeed in getting eating places and movie theaters to desegregate.

Kellett replied, in a letter to CORE Chairman Walter Carter: "The Colts are aware of the situation in Westminster and in the past have tried to solve the problem. It is indeed true that all reasonable-thinking men realize that circumstances such as these are intolerable.

"The Colts deplore any intolerance and hope the good people of Westminster will resolve the problem so the Colts may continue to use the fine facilities of Western Maryland College as they have been doing since the return of the Colts to Baltimore in 1953."

Colts To Discuss Training Site Segregation

BALTIMORE (AP) — Don Kellett, general manager of the Baltimore Colts, said Wednesday he plans to meet again with town officials in Westminster, Md., to discuss a complaint about segregated facilities there.

The National Football League club has conducted its pre-season training at the Western Maryland College campus in Westminster the past 10 years.

Kellett said he would go to Westminster in about one month. He said a decision on the site of the training camp for 1963 will not be made until after April 1.

The Baltimore branch of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE) had asked the Colts in December to move the training camp elsewhere if the management did not succeed in getting eating places and movie theaters to desegregate.

Kellett replied, in a letter to CORE Chairman Walter Carter:

"The Colts are aware of the situation in Westminster and in the past have tried to solve the problem. It is indeed true that all reasonable-thinking men realize that circumstances such as these are intolerable.

"The Colts deplore any intolerance and hope the good people of Westminster will resolve the problem so the Colts may continue to use the fine facilities of Western Maryland College as they have been doing since the return of the Colts to Baltimore in 1953."

All-Star Game May Be Finale For Tripucka

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — Quarterback Frank Tripucka of Denver, a 14-year veteran of professional football, said Wednesday the American Football League All-Star game Sunday may be his final game.

A veteran of three years in the National Football League, eight in the Canadian League and three in the AFL, Tripucka said that he needs to spend more time with his wife and seven children. They spent the season in Bloomfield, N.J., while Tripucka was pitching footballs for the Broncos.

The 35-year-old former Notre Dame star passed for 2,917 yards this season to lead the league and keep the Broncos in contention for the Western Division title until near the end of the season. He set league passing attempt and completion records in 1960.

Tripucka recently turned down a job coaching the Saskatchewan club of the Canadian League. He owns a liquor store in Bloomfield and said he has been offered a job as assistant recreation director of that city.

Hawks Cop Lead

TORONTO (UPI) — The Chicago Black Hawks scored twice in the opening period and added an insurance goal in the dying minutes of the third period Wednesday night for a 3-1 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs and sole possession of first place in the National Hockey League.

Bright Future For State Seen By Gov. Tawes

Pledges Progress, Fiscal Integrity

By HERB THOMPSON

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — J. Millard Tawes began a second term as governor of Maryland Wednesday with a pledge "to lay the groundwork for the development of all our natural and human resources" in the four years ahead.

The 68-year-old Crisfield Democrat, nattily attired in the cutaway coat and striped trousers he wore for Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's inauguration in 1939, took his oath of office in the Senate chamber in a traditional ceremony dating back to 1777.

The chamber and its galleries were packed to overflowing with the 171 members of the legislature, friends and relatives of Gov. Tawes and other invited guests.

A relatively small crowd listened on speakers outside the chambers and went outdoors later for the governor's inaugural address, which he delivered in brisk 42-degree temperatures from a platform erected by the east portico of the State House.

State Police estimated the total turnout at 1,500.

Sees New Era

Chief Judge Frederick W. Brune administered the oath to the state's 59th elected governor, who rested his left hand on the Bible opened to the 23rd Psalm.

Tawes then went upstairs and prepared the nomination of Lloyd L. Simpkins of Princess Anne as secretary of state. The 42-year-old incumbent was immediately confirmed for a new term by the Maryland Senate.

Tawes spoke hopefully in his inaugural address of Maryland's future in the years immediately ahead.

"I believe that Maryland is on the threshhold of a new era — an era that will witness the greatest expansion of physical and natural resources that has ever been seen in the history of our state," he said.

He pledged continued progress in the fields of education, health, welfare, and conservation of natural and human resources. Such urban problems as traffic and transit, water supply and sewerage, taxation and slum clearance also press for a solution, he said.

Tawes said it is the principal task of his administration "to achieve these new standards and at the same time to preserve the financial integrity of the state."

Priorities Needed

The needs of one group must be balanced against those of another for the good of the state, he said, and each project must be allocated a priority.

"Under such a system, great tolerance is required," Tawes said. "...To be all things to all people is to satisfy no one and accomplish virtually nothing."

In an obvious reference to pending civil rights legislation, he said Maryland can make a real contribution to the cause of liberty throughout the world "by extending to all people those rights which our forefathers so rightly declared were inalienable."

"If, to promote freedom and justice throughout the world, we are required to alter traditions, then let us alter traditions," Tawes said. "The world is changing, we cannot afford to be so foolish as not to change with it."

The legislature put aside all of its other business to join in the inaugural activities, which started at 11 a.m. and continued through most of the day.

Tawes and a line of other dignitaries were escorted to the ceremony in the Senate chamber through a cordon of State Police stretching from the governor's mansion to the State House.

Reception Held

The Right Rev. Noble C. Powell, Episcopal bishop of Maryland gave the invocation in the Senate chamber. Dr. Daniel Ridout, administrative assistant of the Methodist Church in the Baltimore area, gave the invocation before the inaugural address. The Most Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, archbishop of Baltimore, gave a prayer after the address. Rabbi Abraham Shusterman of Har Sinai Congregation in Baltimore gave the benediction.

Music was supplied by the U.S. Naval Academy band, the University of Maryland Chapel Choir and a quintet from the Hollywood Methodist Church in St. Marys County.

For her husband's inauguration, Mrs. Tawes wore a taupe wool suit with a wide sheared beaver collar and a band of the same fur around the hemline. She carried brown leather accessories and wore a tiny flowered pillbox hat with a short veil.

A public reception was held in the State House immediately following the inaugural address.

Elementary Band Starts

84 Elementary Pupils Report For Area Band

Some 84 talented young musicians attended the first rehearsal of the Cumberland area elementary school band this week at the West Side School, according to Robert O. Nutter, traveling instrumental instructor who will direct the band.

Cumberland, LaVale and Flintstone were well represented among the youngsters who reported for the organizational meeting Tuesday afternoon.

An elementary school string orchestra will be formed this afternoon at 4 o'clock when the candidates meet at West Side School with Miss Christina MacDonald, string instructor in the public schools.

Mr. Nutter said last night that there still are openings for additional members of the band who should report for the next rehearsal at 4 p. m. next Tuesday.

The band will continue to rehearse each Tuesday afternoon at West Side School until early May when a concert will be presented.

The string orchestra, which will start this afternoon, will continue rehearsals each Thursday afternoon until late Spring when it will present a concert too.

Plans for these two musicial groups among elementary students were announced last month by LaVern J. Hahn, county supervisor of music education.

Elementary School Pupils Will Be Tested

Most of the Allegany County elementary school principals met with the two supervisors of elementary education yesterday afternoon at the Board of Education office for a final discussion about the elementary testing program which will start today and continue at least until January 18.

The supervisors are Miss Margaret E. Doak and Miss Elizabeth I. Flake.

Instead of the California achievement test, the children in the third and sixth grades will take the Iowa test of basic skills for the first time this year. The supervisors pointed out that the Iowa test is considered superior to the California one because the norms for the Iowa test were established through nation-wide testing. California's norms were based on the experience in that single most populour state in the nation.

The Iowa test attempts to measure vocabulary, reading comprehension, language skill, punctuation, spelling, capitalization, punctuation and usage. Work study skills to be tested include map reading, reading graphs and tables, knowledge and use of reference books, arithmetic concepts and solving arithmetic problems.

Children in the second grade of elementary schools throughout the county also will be given the Otis quick scoring mental ability test.

Nearly 4,000 boys and girls will be involved in the testing starting today. There are about 1,300 second graders, about 1,300 third graders, and about 1,350 sixth graders.

The tests will be graded about January 21 and the materials will be returned to the Board of Education office on or before January 31.

CSMC Section Meeting Friday At Carroll Hall

The second quarterly meeting of the Western Maryland Section of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade will be held tomorrow at 1:40 p. m. at Carrall Hall.

Miss Martha Neely, senior at Ursuline Academy, who is president of the unit, will open the program and a short talk will be given by Rev. John U. Lyness, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, director of the section.

A movie and recording on the advance and turning of the tide of Communism will be seen and heard by some 600 students who are expected to attend.

Those who will attend are students at Ursuline Academy, Catholic Girls Central High School and LaSalle High School, Cumberland, and St. Peter's School Westernport.

Miss Neely said the organization has been sponsoring skating parties each month in order to raise funds for mission work.

Other officers of the section are Edward Sheehe, LaSalle senior, vice president; Elizabeth Twigg, senior at Central, secretary; and Martha Kazlo, senior at St. Peter's, treasurer.

Council Donates To Organ Fund

The Workers' Council of St. Mark's United Church donated an additional $100 to the church organ fund at its meeting Tuesday night.

The stewardship program was discussed and literature was distributed. Announcement was made of the Youth Fellowship soup sale February 6, and routine reports were given.

Mrs. Carl Clapp and Miss Irene Lapp served refreshments.

Others attending were Mrs. Florence Stein, Mrs. Henry Pyles, Miss Ida Goodwin, Mrs. Ada Keady, Mrs. Charles Twigg, Mrs. Sara Stouffer, Mrs. Elizabeth Wrachford, Mrs. Nancy Troutman, Mrs. Elizabeth Palmer, Mrs. Cleda Flora, Mrs. Margaret Ballard, Dale Mull and Carl Smith.

Delegate Asks Salute, Promise For Taxpayers

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—A Frederick County delegate proposed Wednesday that the legislature honor the "sometimes almost forgotten taxpayer of the State of Maryland" with a salute and a promise.

Del. Charles E. Collins said the taxpayers should be saluted for their "worthy help without which the great State of Maryland would not be great."

At the same time, he resolved that the General Assembly "dedicate itself to use every possible means to try to prevent the further increase in taxes and to use all means in its power to effect full value for needed services for every tax dollar spent."

His views were reflected in a joint resolution introduced in the house and requiring concurrence of the senate as well to take effect.

Everett Held For Trial On False Pretense

A local man who was arrested late Tuesday night has been charged with attempting to obtain money under false pretenses, city police said.

Raymond G. Everett, 529 Pine Avenue, according to City Police Detective Captain James E. Van, is in City Jail awaiting a hearing at 10 a.m. today in Trial Magistrate's Court.

Van said the man was reported to have attempted to solicit $72.50 from a local minister. He also was reported to have gone to the office of the Associated Charities on Tuesday and tried to solicit money.

Detective Harry Iser assisted Van in the arrest.

In other police activities, two teen-age youths arrested in connection with the breaking and entering of the Hub Store, 19-23 North Centre Street, are to be given a hearing on Monday at 10 a.m. in Juvenile Court.

Van said a 14-year-old local boy admitted breaking and entering the business establishment and implicated a Wiley Ford youth during questioning at Police Headquarters.

The entry occurred on December 15 and two hunting knives were stolen, police said. Detective Iser assisted Capt. Van in the case.

Public Safety Basement Is Being Cleaned

The basement of the Public Safety Building is being cleaned and modernized, according to Police and Fire Commissioner William V. Keegan.

The work will include the removal of debris which has piled up over the years.

A new entrance door and a steel door to the entrance of the paint shop will be installed by the Street Department.

The telephone company has been asked to remove dozens of unused wires from the ceiling.

A fence will be built around the new furnace in the interest of safety, and the elevator shaft will be closed up.

Mr. Keegan said that the entire area will be painted as soon as the rubbish is removed.

The work is being undertaken now while maintenance workers are not busy outside because of the weather.

River Board Will Visit Dulles Airport

Regional Sewers Will Be Discussed

The regional sewer program in the Washington metropolitan area will be the theme of the winter meeting of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin January 24 and 25 at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria, Va.

A highlight of the two-day meeting will be a bus tour of the new Dulles International Airport on January 24. Buses will leave the hotel at noon, proceed to the airport, where lunch will be served.

The group will inspect the terminal water facilities, including the sewage lagoons, and the erosion control program. The return to the hotel is scheduled for 5 p.m.

John A. Carver Jr., assistant secretary for public management of the U.S. Department of the Interior, will be the guest speaker at the banquet scheduled for 7 p. m. January 24.

State Senator H. Winship Wheatley Jr. of Prince George's County, chairman of the Interstate Commission, will start the meeting with remarks at 9:30 a. m. January 24. Carl J. Johnson, executive director of the Interstate Commission, then will look in three directions in remarks entitled "Past, Present and Future."

Two other speakers are scheduled for the opening morning. General F. J. Kenney Article Cites Local Industrial Change

Francis A. Kenney, manager of the Cumberland office of the Maryland Department of Employment Security, has contributed an article entitled "Industrial Development in Cumberland" in the December issue of Employment Security Review.

The Employment Security Review is published by the U. S. Bureau of Employment Security with the cooperation of the state employment security agencies and is distributed without charge to personnel of the national and state employment security offices.

Mr. Kenney notes in his article that the Cumberland labor market has been in the labor surplus category since March 1949. He observed that all over the nation textiles, railroads and coal mining were hard hit, but Cumberland, having all three, seemed in a desperate situation.

Economic History

The author then traces the economic history of Cumberland from 1750 to the present. From 1750 to 1800 it was essentially a military and trading post established by Virginia "interests" with Maryland looking on. The half-century beginning in 1800 was marked by the development of roads oriented toward trade and commerce between the growing midwest and eastern cities.

From 1850 to 1900 came the development of railroad and canal, especially relating to coal shipments and trans-shipments between the east coast and the midwest or far west. The half-century starting in 1900 featured railroads dominating transportation in the area and gradual decline of coal and development of manufacturing industries.

Since 1950, the economic history has been marked by a transition from coal-railroad economy to urban industrial area based on intermediate and light manufacturing, with good highways and a large service area for sales and services extending about 50 miles in all directions.

Mr. Kenney goes on to state that the Cumberland labor market more nearly resembles northern West Virginia and southwestern Pennsylvania than it does the rest of Maryland. Currently, he says, the Appalachian areas in the eastern United States are thought of as being "deprived" in regard to roads, development of water resources and the general programs of government designed to promote development. Here he says that Maryland Governor J. Millard Tawes has attempted to attack the problem on a regional basis in cooperation with the other Appalachian governors.

Favorable Developments

The manager of the Cumberland office of the Department of Employment Security then cites a number of events of the past 10 years which have helped to restore optimism in Cumberland.

First he mentions the construction of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company plant here, one of the most modern glass producing plants in the world. Then he points to the just-announced plans to add the "float" process which will expand the physicial facilities and may provide a substantial number of new jobs.

Jury's Right To Decide Law Under Attack

By TOM SEPPY

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—The Maryland General Assembly was asked Wednesday to repeal a section of the constitution which permits a jury in a criminal case to determine how the law should be applied in that case as well as trying the facts of the case.

Del. Maurice Cardin, D-Balto 5th, introduced the bill which needs the concurrence of three-fifths of all the members elected to both the house and the senate in order to be enacted.

Maryland and Indiana are the only states which still adhere to the concept that a jury shall be the judge of the law as well as the facts in a criminal case. Indiana has modified its concept that a jury has no "exclusive" right to such determination.

The validity of that section of the constitution was upheld recently in the Court of Appeals.

Attorneys for two men charged with rape contended that the Maryland provision violates the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

The state's high court, in striking down the argument, reaffirmed a 1949 decision which upheld the provision.

"So far as we are advised, the Supreme Court of the United States has not rendered any decision since (the 1949 ruling) which would now require a different result from that reached by this court," the Court of Appeals said in its opinion.

The court said the attorneys should find their relief with the legislative branch of the government.

If the measure is passed by both the senate and the house, it would have to be ratified by the public at the general election in 1964 before it could be stricken from the constitution.

Bright Future For State Seen By Gov. Tawes

Pledges Progress, Fiscal Integrity

By HERB THOMPSON

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — J. Millard Tawes began a second term as governor of Maryland Wednesday with a pledge "to lay the groundwork for the development of all our natural and human resources" in the four years ahead.

The 68-year-old Crisfield Democrat, nattily attired in the cutaway coat and striped trousers he wore for Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's inauguration in 1939, took his oath of office in the Senate chamber in a traditional ceremony dating back to 1777.

The chamber and its galleries were packed to overflowing with the 171 members of the legislature, friends and relatives of Gov. Tawes and other invited guests.

A relatively small crowd listened on speakers outside the chambers and went outdoors later for the governor's inaugural address, which he delivered in brisk 42-degree temperatures from a platform erected by the east portico of the State House.

State Police estimated the total turnout at 1,500.

Sees New Era

Chief Judge Frederick W. Brune administered the oath to the state's 59th elected governor, who rested his left hand on the Bible opened to the 23rd Psalm.

Tawes then went upstairs and prepared the nomination of Lloyd L. Simpkins of Princess Anne as secretary of state. The 42-year-old incumbent was immediately confirmed for a new term by the Maryland Senate.

Tawes spoke hopefully in his inaugural address of Maryland's future in the years immediately ahead.

"I believe that Maryland is on the threshhold of a new era — an era that will witness the greatest expansion of physical and natural resources that has ever been seen in the history of our state," he said.

He pledged continued progress in the fields of education, health, welfare, and conservation of natural and human resources. Such urban problems as traffic and transit, water supply and sewerage, taxation and slum clearance also press for a solution, he said.

Tawes said it is the principal task of his administration "to achieve these new standards and at the same time to preserve the financial integrity of the state."

Priorities Needed

The needs of one group must be balanced against those of another for the good of the state, he said, and each project must be allocated a priority.

"Under such a system, great tolerance is required," Tawes said. "...To be all things to all people is to satisfy no one and accomplish virtually nothing."

In an obvious reference to pending civil rights legislation, he said Maryland can make a real contribution to the cause of liberty throughout the world "by extending to all people those rights which our forefathers so rightly declared were inalienable."

"If, to promote freedom and justice throughout the world, we are required to alter traditions, then let us alter traditions," Tawes said. "The world is changing, we cannot afford to be so foolish as not to change with it."

The legislature put aside all of its other business to join in the inaugural activities, which started at 11 a.m. and continued through most of the day.

Tawes and a line of other dignitaries were escorted to the ceremony in the Senate chamber through a cordon of State Police stretching from the governor's mansion to the State House.

Reception Held

The Right Rev. Noble C. Powell, Episcopal bishop of Maryland gave the invocation in the Senate chamber. Dr. Daniel Ridout, administrative assistant of the Methodist Church in the Baltimore area, gave the invocation before the inaugural address. The Most Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, archbishop of Baltimore, gave a prayer after the address. Rabbi Abraham Shusterman of Har Sinai Congregation in Baltimore gave the benediction.

Music was supplied by the U.S. Naval Academy band, the University of Maryland Chapel Choir and a quintet from the Hollywood Methodist Church in St. Marys County.

For her husband's inauguration, Mrs. Tawes wore a taupe wool suit with a wide sheared beaver collar and a band of the same fur around the hemline. She carried brown leather accessories and wore a tiny flowered pillbox hat with a short veil.

A public reception was held in the State House immediately following the inaugural address.

Elementary Band Starts

84 Elementary Pupils Report For Area Band

Some 84 talented young musicians attended the first rehearsal of the Cumberland area elementary school band this week at the West Side School, according to Robert O. Nutter, traveling instrumental instructor who will direct the band.

Cumberland, LaVale and Flintstone were well represented among the youngsters who reported for the organizational meeting Tuesday afternoon.

An elementary school string orchestra will be formed this afternoon at 4 o'clock when the candidates meet at West Side School with Miss Christina MacDonald, string instructor in the public schools.

Mr. Nutter said last night that there still are openings for additional members of the band who should report for the next rehearsal at 4 p. m. next Tuesday.

The band will continue to rehearse each Tuesday afternoon at West Side School until early May when a concert will be presented.

The string orchestra, which will start this afternoon, will continue rehearsals each Thursday afternoon until late Spring when it will present a concert too.

Plans for these two musicial groups among elementary students were announced last month by LaVern J. Hahn, county supervisor of music education.

Elementary School Pupils Will Be Tested

Most of the Allegany County elementary school principals met with the two supervisors of elementary education yesterday afternoon at the Board of Education office for a final discussion about the elementary testing program which will start today and continue at least until January 18.

The supervisors are Miss Margaret E. Doak and Miss Elizabeth I. Flake.

Instead of the California achievement test, the children in the third and sixth grades will take the Iowa test of basic skills for the first time this year. The supervisors pointed out that the Iowa test is considered superior to the California one because the norms for the Iowa test were established through nation-wide testing. California's norms were based on the experience in that single most populour state in the nation.

The Iowa test attempts to measure vocabulary, reading comprehension, language skill, punctuation, spelling, capitalization, punctuation and usage. Work study skills to be tested include map reading, reading graphs and tables, knowledge and use of reference books, arithmetic concepts and solving arithmetic problems.

Children in the second grade of elementary schools throughout the county also will be given the Otis quick scoring mental ability test.

Nearly 4,000 boys and girls will be involved in the testing starting today. There are about 1,300 second graders, about 1,300 third graders, and about 1,350 sixth graders.

The tests will be graded about January 21 and the materials will be returned to the Board of Education office on or before January 31.

Delegate Asks Salute, Promise For Taxpayers

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—A Frederick County delegate proposed Wednesday that the legislature honor the "sometimes almost forgotten taxpayer of the State of Maryland" with a salute and a promise.

Del. Charles E. Collins said the taxpayers should be saluted for their "worthy help without which the great State of Maryland would not be great."

At the same time, he resolved that the General Assembly "dedicate itself to use every possible means to try to prevent the further increase in taxes and to use all means in its power to effect full value for needed services for every tax dollar spent."

His views were reflected in a joint resolution introduced in the house and requiring concurrence of the senate as well to take effect.

Everett Held For Trial On False Pretense

A local man who was arrested late Tuesday night has been charged with attempting to obtain money under false pretenses, city police said.

Raymond G. Everett, 529 Pine Avenue, according to City Police Detective Captain James E. Van, is in City Jail awaiting a hearing at 10 a.m. today in Trial Magistrate's Court.

Van said the man was reported to have attempted to solicit $72.50 from a local minister. He also was reported to have gone to the office of the Associated Charities on Tuesday and tried to solicit money.

Detective Harry Iser assisted Van in the arrest.

In other police activities, two teen-age youths arrested in connection with the breaking and entering of the Hub Store, 19-23 North Centre Street, are to be given a hearing on Monday at 10 a.m. in Juvenile Court.

Van said a 14-year-old local boy admitted breaking and entering the business establishment and implicated a Wiley Ford youth during questioning at Police Headquarters.

The entry occurred on December 15 and two hunting knives were stolen, police said. Detective Iser assisted Capt. Van in the case.

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—The Maryland General Assembly was asked Wednesday to repeal a section of the constitution which permits a jury in a criminal case to determine how the law should be applied in that case as well as trying the facts of the case.

Del. Maurice Cardin, D-Balto 5th, introduced the bill which needs the concurrence of three-fifths of all the members elected to both the house and the senate in order to be enacted.

Maryland and Indiana are the only states which still adhere to the concept that a jury shall be the judge of the law as well as the facts in a criminal case. Indiana has modified its concept that a jury has no "exclusive" right to such determination.

The validity of that section of the constitution was upheld recently in the Court of Appeals.

Attorneys for two men charged with rape contended that the Maryland provision violates the due process and equal protection clauses of the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

The state's high court, in striking down the argument, reaffirmed a 1949 decision which upheld the provision.

"So far as we are advised, the Supreme Court of the United States has not rendered any decision since (the 1949 ruling) which would now require a different result from that reached by this court," the Court of Appeals said in its opinion.

The court said the attorneys should find their relief with the legislative branch of the government.

If the measure is passed by both the senate and the house, it would have to be ratified by the public at the general election in 1964 before it could be stricken from the constitution.
